Executive privilege not absolute, justices say

BY W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — "It is emphatically the province and duty of the judicial department to say what the law is," Chief Justice John Marshall wrote 171 years ago.

Wednesday, ruling in the case of President Nixon and the Watergate tapes, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger found those words handy to express his meaning.

"It's 'emphatically the province and duty' of this court to 'say what the law is' with respect to the claim of privilege presented in this case," Burger wrote for eight justices of the court.

"What the law is" boiled down to this:

Yes, the President has a privilege to withhold confidential communications within the executive branch from public scrutiny.

No, that privilege is not absolute but is subject to review by the courts.

It was the first time in the nearly 185-year history of the court that it had been confronted with a claim such as the one advanced by Nixon: that only the President can decide whether he should provide evidence wanted for a criminal trial.

In answering the question, the court said it agrees with Nixon that it is important for conversations between high government officials and their advisers to be confidential.

"Human experience teaches that those who expect public dissemination of their remarks may well temper candor with a concern for appearances,"

Jaworski seeks prompt delivery of Nixon tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski moved today to seek a prompt order from U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica to speed delivery of the 64 Watergate tapes and documents the Supreme Court said President Nixon must surrender.

The prosecutor's office announced it would submit a motion to Sirica later in the day, requesting him to direct presidential compliance with the order.

Presidential attorney James St. Clair, in announcing Nixon's decision Wednesday night to comply with the historic high court directive, said a "time-consuming process' was needed to prepare the tapes and related materials.

A Jaworski spokesman said the special prosecutor's office believes 33 of the tapes and documents are virtually ready to be turned over.

Of these, 20 were included in the partial White House transcripts released last Spring, 12 others were given Nixon by appointments secretary Stephen Bull at that time and a partial transcript of one was supplied the House Judiciary Committee by St. Clair last week, the spokesman added.

Nixon announced his decision to comply with the ruling "in all respects" in a statement issued through St. Clair at the Western White House in San Clemente, Calif. eight hours after the court issued its 8-0 ruling Wednesday.

While I am disappointed in the result, I respect and accept the court decision, and I have instructed Mr. St. Clair to take whatever measures are necessary to comply with that decision in all respects," Nixon said.

The President had challenged Jaworski's subpoena for the tapes and materials. The special prosecutor said they were needed for the Watergate cover-up trial of six former White House and campaign aides, scheduled to start Sept. 9. The defendants include H. R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman and John N. Mitchell.

After the tapes and documents are submitted to Judge Sirica, he must screen them for relevance before mak-

Impeachment views aired by members of Judiciary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Winding through day and night impeachment debate, the House Judiciary Committee today heard a Republican plead for fairness to President Nixon and a Democrat urge his ouster for "open and notorious defiance of the law."

Opening the second round of the nationally televised colloquy, Republican Rep. Charles E. Wiggins of California declared Nixon "is entitled to a presumption of innocence."

The second speaker, Democratic Rep. John Conyers of Michigan, countered that Nixon must be removed from office "to restore to our government the proper balance of constitutional power and serve notice to all future presidents that such abuse of conduct ... never again be tolerated."

At specific issue was a two-article resolution of impeachment charging Nixon with obstruction of justice and other abuses of the presidency including contempt of Congress.

Not since 1868, when Andrew Johnson was exonerated by the Senate, had any such effort to remove a President gotten so far.

Conyers, one of the outspoken Nixon critics on the committee, charged the President was responsible for "wholesale violation of the constitutional rights of citizens."

He also sharply criticized Nixon's refusal to comply with the panel's subpoenas, declaring: "Unto this day the President is in open and notorious defiance of the law because he has failed to comply with the directives of this committee to produce the documents that we needed ..."

Wiggin's plea for fairness came despite Tuesday's claim from other GOP defender of the President that a committee decision against Nixon is assured.

Wiggins has frequently been characterized as Nixon's most articulate defender on the committee, but he told the committee's second session of formal debate that "I wince" at that label because he believes simply that the

Cross-district busing integration plan voided

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today struck down by a 5-4 vote, a controversial desegregation plan calling for busing pupils across school district lines in the Detroit area.

The decision sent the case back to U.S. District Court in Detroit, where the plan was approved two years ago by the late Judge Steven J. Roth.

Another judge will now consider the matter.

The Supreme Court said Roth erred in ordering a desegregation plan embracing both Detroit and its suburbs without any evidence as to whether the suburban districts were segregated.

The lower court was directed to formulate desegregation plan for the city itself.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, speaking for the court, said federal courts may not impose multidistrict desegregation plans where there is no finding that all the school districts included had failed to operate integrated school systems.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, the only black member of the court, dissented, saying:

"We deal here with the right of all of our children, whatever their race, to an equal start in life and to an equal opportunity to reach their full potential as citizens. Those children who have been denied that right in the past deserve better than to see fences thrown up to deny them that right in the future."

Also dissenting were Justices William O. Douglas, William J. Brennan

Hoaxer pretends she's Pat Hearst

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman tricked police into believing she was fugitive heiress Patricia Hearst and was willing to surrender, bringing 150 policemen to a North Hollywood apartment.

Police officials called off their operation early today after the hoax unfolded:

—Miss Hearst's parents and sister flew anxiously to Los Angeles from San Francisco. Her father was "very disappointed," and the family quickly returned home.

—Officers surrounded an apartment building, blocked off streets and negotiated by telephone with the hoaxer, who said she wanted to surrender to "Uncle George." Rumors later buzzed that Miss Hearst had been in the apartment building but had escaped.

—A police spokesman said officers raided an apartment but found only a cat, a .22-caliber rifle and an automatic shotgun. Three persons who were in the apartment, including a 13-year-old girl who bears a strong resemblance to Miss Hearst, said they were grabbed by detectives and questioned.

Police said the guns had a legitimate owner with no connection to the Symbionese Liberation Army, which kidnaped Miss Hearst at Berkeley, Calif., in February.

The hoaxer wasn't found, and a police spokesman said later "we had no evidence that Miss Hearst or any SLA member was ever there."

After all the excitement, Police Chief Ed Davis summed up the Wednesday night operation as "a good command exercise." Lt. Dan Cook, the police spokeman said it was "a practice in futility."

It all began when three persons called police between 6 and 6:30 p.m. and said a woman fitting the description of Miss Hearst, who after her abduction renounced her family and said she was joining her terrorist captors.

Police said the three callers said the woman who entered the building was followed later by a black man carrying a rifle.

Officers went to the building, contacted the manager and showed her photographs of Miss Hearst and SLA members William and Emily Harris, all being sought on a variety of state and federal charges. The manager, Marcella Tyler, identified Miss Hearst and Mrs. Harris as being seen in the building, police said.

Later she told newsmen she was positive she saw Miss Hearst, but she wouldn't elaborate.

Police massed near the building. A Special Qeapons and Tactics squad team arrived, on of those which spearheaded a fiery gun battle in which six members of the SLA died here May 17.

A woman who said she was inside telephoned police and said she wanted to give herself up to "Uncle George." Miss Hearst's cousin, George Hearst Jr., is publisher of the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner. Her uncle, George Hearst Sr., died in 1972.

"We should have realized that Hearst Sr. was dead and that the call was a hoax," Chief Davis said.

Police refused to say how long they talked to the woman or whether she identified herself as Miss Hearst. But officers believed she could have been the heiress "because of the detailed information she gave," Cook said.

Karen Cunca, 19, her husband, Edward, 22, and 13-year-old Kelly Ravenscroft were playing cards in the apartment that police believed was occupied by the newspaper heiress.

"Someone came and began banging on the door," said Cunca. "It was a neighbor who said to lock the doors and windows because Patty Hearst was in the complex.

"I ran out of the apartment and a couple of detectives grabbed us and said they wanted to talk to us. They took us down the street and into the manager's apartment for questioning and then let us go."

The guns were owned by a friend, Chris Garza, 20, who also lived in the apartment, said Mrs. Cunca. "They're hunting rifles," she said. "Chris likes to hunt."

Garza was not in the apartment, but police said after the four-hour operation that he was checked out and "was clean."

10 hostages held by Texas inmates

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Prison officials began moving tear gas equipment today into a state prison unit where armed convicts threatened to kill 10 hostages.

W. J. Estelle Jr., director of the Texas Department of Corrections, said the situation was "stable," and "negotiations are going on by telephone." He refused comment about the equipment.

An armed takeover of a third-floor library was led by Fred Gomez Carrasco, a prisoner serving a life sentence, prison authorities said.

Prison information director Ron Taylor, when asked about reports of shooting, said no one had been shot and killed. But when asked if no one had been shot, he responded, "I'm not saying that."

Taylor went back inside the ivy-covered prison fortress when asked to comment on the presence of tear gas equipment.

Early today prison guards began bringing into the downtown prison compound three gas generators, gas mask boxes and what appeared to be a supply of weapons.

Authorities said seven convicts were with the hostages, but one of the convicts was not believed to be an active participant in the rebellion.

The hostages are seven women and three men, said Dr. Don Kirkpatrick, assistant director of the Texas Department of Corrections. One of the men is a guard and the other hostages are civilian teachers and librarians.

Kirkpatrick told newsmen Wednesday night that Carrasco had demanded six bullet-proof vests, three bullet-proof helmets and visors, three walkie-talkie radios, three M16 automatic rifles, five magazines of ammunition, 100 loose rounds for each rifle and "suitable clothing for the three of us."

Kirkpatrick said Carrasco, who was sentenced to life for assault with attempt to murder a police officer at San Antonio, had threatened to execute the hostages if the demands were not met.

"Mr. Carrasco is not pushing us for any time deadline," Kirkpatrick said. "It is also interesting to note there have been no transportation demands."

Kirkpatrick said there was only a double door leading into the library and Carrasco was making the hostages sit in front of it, rotating them about every 20 minutes.

This prevented sharpshooters from firing into the room, Kirkpatrick said.

He said several of the convicts had talked to their lawyers.

In addition to Carrasco, the other convicts were identified as Rudolfo Dominguez of San Antonio, serving a 15-year term for assault to murder; Ignacio Cuevas, a Mexican national serving 45 years for murder; Florecio Vera, 29, of San Antonio, 10 years for burglary; Martin Cuiroz, 27, of Houston, two years for possession of codeine, a narcotic; Henry S. Escamilla, 40, of San Antonio, five years for shoplifting; and Stephen Ray Robertson, 26, Dallas, 16 years for rape.

Kirkpatrick said, however, that he did not believe Robertson was an active participant.

The rebels' demands were delivered to officials by the prison chaplain, the Rev. Joseph O'Brien, a Roman Catholic priest who was in and out of the library several times Wednesday night conferring with Carrasco. Carrasco served as a porter in the prison chapel.

Prison authorities said Carrasco and his companions took control of the library about 1 p.m. Wednesday, brandishing three handguns. Officials said they did not know where the convicts obtained the weapons because correctional officers at the prison do not carry arms.

The convicts originally took 11 hostages, but one, Glennon Johnson, 51, suffered an apparent heart attack about 9:30 p.m. and Carrasco freed him.

Johnson was reported in stable condition at a Huntsville hospital.

Prison officials said there were 57 inmates in the library at the time of the takeover, including Carrasco.

The rebels let 50 inmates leave immediately and another three left some 5½ hours later, just before Father O'Brien emerged from his first conference with the rebels.

Chenault to get public defender in King case

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Superior Court Judge Luther Alverson has declared the man accused of fatally shooting Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr. to be a pauper and said the court will appoint a public defender to assist in his defense.

At the same time, the lawyer who has been representing Marcus Wayne Chenault said he would continue in the case.

Chenault, 23, faces two murder charges and one of aggravated assault in the June 30 slayings at Ebenezer Baptist Church of Mrs. King and deacon Edward Boykin, and the wounding of Mrs. Jimmie Mitchell. The shootings occurred during Sunday church services.

Skirt length debate drones on and on

By ALISON LERRICK

PARIS (AP) — These days it's rather difficult to get all hot and bothered about fashion. Women wear what they want, and if you don't like it, you can just look in another direction.

There is one issue, nonetheless, which still can evoke heated debate among those who care about clothes. You may choose to dress Chinese, Mexican, Japanese, Russian or like a Swiss mountaineer. But what you really want to know is: what length do I wear my skirt?

In the collections for fall and winter that the Paris houses begin showing Monday, the midcalf skirt is back, once again.

It was around in the 1930's, came back in 1947 with the New Look, flopped miserably circa 1970, and now the couture houses are giving the length what may well be its last chance.

If women refuse to wear it now, the long skirt will probably go the way of the whalebone corset. Straight to the attic.

The feeling for next winter is big, loose, soft and long. Everything drops, swings, flops and balloons. Huge coats with big armholes and shoulders dropping to mid-bicep go over easy shirtdresses and skirts that flare with lots of gathers at the waist.

The waist, incidentally, is always marked and sometimes severely so, with a wide belt. The silk blouse has a tie collar.

The midcalf skirt should be worn with boots. No leg should show. That's exactly how it was worn four years ago, and it's still a good idea for cold weather. No one, but no one should be wearing pants any more.

Naturally, the couturiers are also playing fashion safe. They will continue to show many skirts just covering the knee. After all, their clothes are made to sell, not to make conversation. These demure skirts, which come straight, A-line or wrap, go with long skinny jackets in light wools, flannel, cashmere or tweed.

Dior favors big artist's smock jackets, too, and Saint Laurent has some of the skinny knit jackets trimmed in fur that made a hit a year ago and have been busily copied since.

For evening, skirts have shortened. The ankle is the correct length for soft dresses in crepe, satin and chiffon. Think of it as the spirit of contradiction or the quest for new forms, but designers simply can't resist shortening and lengthening skirts.

The problem is that, while anyone can shorten a hem when the midcalf length goes out again, it's practically impossible to lengthen a skirt.

Mamie recounts life with Ike

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Mamie Eisenhower says she still hasn't gotten used to the fact that her husband, who died five years ago, is gone.

"It used to anger me when people would say, 'You're an Army wife, you must be used to Ike being away.'" Mrs. Eisenhower said in an interview published today in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

"I never got used to him being gone. He was my husband. He was my whole life," she said.

Mrs. Eisenhower has lived in semiseclusion on her 190-acre farm here since her husband's death. The Eisenhowers took up residence on the farm, which is now a national historical site, in 1955, the year President Eisenhower suffered his first heart attack.

Eisenhower stocked the farm with 243 choice grade cattle. During his retirement, he entered some of his Black Angus bulls in the Pennsylvania Farm Show. "I couldn't have told you how many cattle we had," Mrs. Eisenhower said. "I always said the outside was Ike's and the inside was mine."

Mrs. Eisenhower says she is comforted by visits to the Eisenhower Library in Abilene, Kan. "It gives me a good feeling that Ike's at peace there in Abilene," she said. "He's in his old neighborhood, surrounded by old friends. There's a place for me, too. But I don't like to look at it or think about it much."

One of her favorite monuments in Gettysburg is the statue of President Eisenhower outside his old office on the Gettysburg College campus. "I always speak to him when I pass it. During the winter, I don't like seeing the snow covering his head."

She said she spends much of her afternoons reading and watching television. "I watch soap operas. That's an awful name for these programs. I find them touching, very true to life."

Mrs. Eisenhower said, however, that she doesn't watch shows about hospitals because "it brings back memories of the months I spent in hospitals during Ike's illnesses."

She said an inner ear problem causes her to occasionally lose her equilibrium and walk unsteadily. She said she is black and blue from bumping into things. The ailment may be the reason for rumors that she has a drinking problem.

About the rumors, she said, "I lived with myself. I knew it wasn't so. And so did my friends. I don't think there's anybody who drinks less than I do."

She said she lives frugally, saving newspaper coupons so she will have extra money to donate to charities. And she seldom discards old clothes. "I'm wearing many of my White House clothes now," she said. "They're all silk. You can't get that much anymore."

As First Lady, Mrs. Eisenhower did not give speeches and never held press conferences. She said she only went to the President's White House office four times and was invited each time.

"I was Ike's wife, John's mother, the children's grandmother," she said "That was all I ever wanted to be."

Ann Landers

Trying it 'their way' is no answer

Dear Ann Landers: May I respond to the homosexual's letter in which he suggests there is something missing—or even peculiar—about heterosexuality?

I have always believed that the purpose of life is not sex, but rather, the purpose of sex is life. Since homosexuality cannot produce life, it somehow seems anti-nature. It reduces sex to an act of pleasure, with no chance of become anything higher.

Since no civilization with pleasure as its goal can survive, I believe homosexuality cannot be a part of The Grand Design. I view it as an abnormality. Furthermore, I resent it when homosexuals suggest there is something strange about me because I haven't tried it "their way." Comment, please,—S.F.

Dear S.F.: I, for one, am fed up to the teeth with articles on unisex, omnisex, pansexual, transsexual, homosexual and bisexual confessions staring at me from the pages of every newspaper and magazine I pick up these days. I'm beginning to feel like a closet heterosexual.

I respect the right of all the aforementioned groups to do their own thing, but now it appears that they want to hang the label "inhibited" or "chicken" on those of us who aren't interested in experimenting in order that we might "speak intelligently" on the subject.

The next person who says to me, "If you haven't tried it, don't knock it," is going to get a knock in the head with the heaviest object I can lay my hands on.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 17-year-old high school student who is sort of messed up. I know darned well you aren't a magician and that you can't straighten out this mess I've made of my life, so why am I writing to you? Because I don't have to look you in the eye. Also, you won't blab it around because you don't know me. And you don't know anyone who does.

Will you please tell me how a 17-year-old kid can get professional help without telling his parents? They'll want to know what's bugging me and I'm not about to play true confessions. Besides, getting professional help is an admission that you are weak, or nutty, or that you can't handle you own life.

If I went to a clinic, would I just walk up to the front desk and say, "I'm wigged out"? Please tell me, first, how do I know I need professional help, and then tell me, how do I go about getting it?—S.L.M.

Dear S.L.M.: Seeking professional help is not an admission that you are nuts. On the contrary. The real dingbats think they are fine and dandy, and everybody else is nuts.

There are various degrees of mental illness and a person needn't be a basket case before he decides he should talk things over with a professional. If you feel very sad, unloved, and think nobody likes you, you need help. Also, the inability to express your real feelings, control your anger, or have fun "like other kids" are symptoms. If you're on drugs you are really sick.

The first step is to talk to your school counselor. If you need intensive therapy, it will be recommended and you will be told where to go to get it. Simply tell your parents you are depressed, and need outside help. No other details are necessary. There's not a person in this world who couldn't profit from counseling at some time during his life. BPW raises $251,091 for ERA ratification

CHICAGO, Ill. — Surpassing its quarter of a million dollar goal, The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs Inc., tallied its Equal Rights Amendment Ratification Fund, the culmination of a year of fund-raising and member contribiton. "A great milestone has been achieved," remarked Jean L. McCarrey, BPW national president, at the organization's national convention which opened Sunday in Chicago's Conrad Hilton Hotell.

"With the $251,091 we have raised, final plans can now be made that will assure ratification of the amendment and its accompanying equal legal rights for all persons."

In her remarks to the membership, McCarrey compared the 12 resolutions of the first women's rights convention in Seneca Falls, N.Y., to the demands of women today. She said, "It is obvious that women still have a way to go to achieve full equality in our society."

McCarrey re-iterated BPW's commitment to ratification of the amendment. An insurance saleswoman and financial planner in Villa Grove, Ill., McCarrey has traveled throughout the nation appearing at press conferences, rallies and workshops on the ERA.

Part of the convention's tribute to retiring Congresswoman Martha W. Griffiths of Michigan, was the tally of contributions Monday which had special meaning for the 3,000 working women present. Griffiths, a BPW member, was the author and co-sponsor of ERA legislation in the U.S. Congress. BPW's fund was organized at Griffiths' insistence that money was the missing ingredient needed to win ratification.

Speaking before the convention delegates representing 170,000 members nationally, Griffiths proclaimed, "We will ratify! We have only five states to go and we are going to get those states.

"Today," Griffiths continued, "there are more women than men voting in every district throughout America. We need only help women in those districts understand what ERA will do for them and the amendment will be ratified."

She urged BPW members to take the offensive in this fall's elections. "Pick out the most vociferous opponent of ERA in your area. Beat him at the polls," she said.

BPW's $251,091 was raised entirely through voluntary contributions. Begun at the organization's 1973 national convention in Miami Beach, it represented the first major financial commitment to the pro-ERA campaign by any national organization. Throughout this year, fund monies have gone to finance coalition offices in target states, workshops, speakers, the bulk printing of brochures covering issues such as ERA and the draft, ERA's effect on men, and the relation of equal rights to traditional family styles.

The event opened Sunday with a speech by Michael J. Howlett, Illinois secretary of state, who said, "1974 may prove to be the American women's year. More women are running for public office this year than ever before. While progress may seem slow for now," he said, "progress is being made.

The convention will close today.

Laws of game limit lead to just one card at a time

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

It's pleasant to lead through an opponent's ace-queen in the hope that your partner has the king. If there are two such suits to lead through, you must choose one or the other. The laws of the game don't allow you to lead both suits at the same time.

Opening lead — ◇ K

This was West's pleasant dilemma at the second trick. He had opened the king of diamonds and had been allowed to hold the trick. Now he could lead either a spade or a club through dummy's ace-queen.

Which to lead*

The answer may be rather obvious, but a very experienced player led a spade and heard about it for weeks afterward.

Declarer played a low spade from dummy, osing to the king. Now there was no further defense. South could easily knock out the ace of hearts and draw trumps, after which he could discard his club losers on dummy's spades.

BETTER CHOICE

Clubs would have been a better lead at the second trick. South would have to lose a trick to the king of clubs and another trick to the king of spades. The result would be a one-trick defeat.

How could West tell which suit to lead through* The best short rule is to lead the hosrter suit — clubs in this case.

After the club finesse has lost, South cannot have enough clubs to discard all of the low spades from dummy. He must still try the spade finesse, losing that as well. But if spades are led first, South may well get rid of his low clubs on dummy's long spades. Leading the shorter suit will usually give you a chance for both tricks rather than only one of them.

DAILY QUESTION

With both sides vulnerable, you deal yourself: S- J 10 H- K 10 9 8 7 3 2 D- 6 C- J 7 5. What do you say*

ANSWER: Bid three hearts if you have good nerves. This would be a fine pre-emptive bid if you were not vulnerable, but conservative players like a somewhat stronger suit when vulnerable.

Consumers urge label improvement

If a clothes-care label on an item you own says it should be washed in "warm" water, just how warm is "warm"?

If the item is described as "bleachable," just how much bleach should you use?

If the label says the shirt or skirt or whatever should be ironed with "medium" heat, to which setting on the sole plate of an iron does "medium" refer? (There are no universal standards in use by the washing machine industry or among clothes irons.)

It was two years ago this month that we became the first country in the world to require, via a 1972 Federal Trade Commission rule, permanent clothes-care labels attached to the garments we buy or to be supplied by manufacturers along with yard goods we buy. With a few important exceptions, compliance with the '72 rule has been refreshingly high—well over 90 per cent—and you're typical if you now take the care labels for granted.

The basic provisions are that durable labels: be permanently attached to virtually all types of finished garments; fully inform you about the regular care and maintenance measures you must take to avoid stretching, shrinking, color running, etc.; warn you about any care methods usually applicable to similar garments which should not be used on this particular one.

For yard goods, the key requirement is that the manufacturer supply care labels for you to sew into the clothes you make.

Key exclusions from the rule: most hosery; hats, gloves and shoes; disposable items and items which need no maintenance; fur and leather garments; completely washable clothes retailing for $3 or less and items that might be "substantially impaired" by a permanent label (transparent clothes) if the FTC has specifically exempted them; purely decorative and ornamental items; fabric remnants or "mill ends." Also not included: household furnishings.

Successful as the care-labeling program has been, it admittedly can be improved and the FTC is now studying literally thousands of criticisms and suggestions for improvements received from consumers and from the textile and dry cleaning industries in these two years. From John LeFevre, staff attorney at the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection, here are five major points that emerge from your tremendous response to the call for improvements:

(1) Too many of you are not getting labels for the yard goods you buy; on this, says LeFevre, you were "unanimous." The problem is that while manufacturers are required to provide wholesalers and retailers with care labels, the middlemen are not technically responsible for making sure consumers get these labels. Sometimes a manufacturer will offer the retailer a discount on material if the retailer agrees to get the labels directly from label manufacturers (the textile manufacturers provide only the information which should appear on the labels). Some retailers, reports LeFevre, "love the discount but forget the labels." Even if they stock the labels, untrained clerks may fail to provide buyers with them. Clearly indicated here is a shift of some of the responsibility to the retailer for providing labels.

(2) Another major problem is incomplete instructions. Directions may be given for washing a garment but not for drying. Or a washing water or drying air temperature limit to prevent color bleeding or fabric shrinking may not be clearly specified. Dry cleaners are calling for more detailed guidelines for dry cleaning various fabrics and garments.

(3) There are too many exceptions to the care labeling requirements. The loudest cry is for labels on household furnishings, such as draperies, upholstery, carpets, blankets and bed covers—and on leather, fur and suede products, especially wearing apparel.

(4) Also a problem is inadequate warning on labels about procedures which might damage an article. Many consumers reported, for instance, manufacturers' failure to specify that the "gentle" washing cycle should be used or that a garment should be tumble-dried in the dryer.

(5) And stickiest of all—the questions with which I began this column. For the issue at stake in these is whether the FTC should prescribe specific standards and definitions to go with its labeling rules—and that's an issue which will take months to resolve.

If you want to add your own comments, write the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection, 6th & Pennsylvania Av., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20580. Your voice will be heard, LeFevre promises, before any proposed revisions become final. This is our program; let's all help make it as pertect as possible. (Copyright, 1974)

Summer heat harms skin

Winter's harsh winds may not be blowing, but don't be mislead into thinking there aren't any other dangerous elements around to harm your skin.

In the dead heat of summer, more women's skin turn into disaster areas than at any other time during the year. You're exposed to the sun more, you shave your legs more, you're perspiring more. Any of these elements represent a real threat to your skin.

The only answer, besides staying indoors all summer long, is to make sure your skin is super moisturized, not just in the morning and at night, but 24 hours a day. You can do this with, among other items, baby lotion.

Carry a small plastic container of moisturizer in your tote bag or pocketbook for on the spot moisturizing wherever you may be.

And do make sure and shower or bathe after a day at the beach or pool to cleanse skin thoroughly of salt or chlorine that could be harmful over a long period.

Bike safety stressed by committee

Appleton and Grand Chute officials will determine the cost of contructing a bicycle path along Meade Street and Apple Creek Road, between Appleton and Plamann Park.

Plans and cost estimates will be presented to the Outagamie County Board's property committee within a month.

An off-the-highway path was seen by some officials at a Wednesday meeting as being the most feasible way of resolving what Supv. Nick Karras of Appleton saw as a serious bike safety problem along the two roads.

Karras, property committee chairman, said that after Appleton and Grand Chute submit their information, steps probably will be taken to finance the project if sufficient interest is shown.

Ira Livingston, Grand Chute town chairman, said he will check with the state Department of Transportation about the legality of constructing bike paths in highway right of way.

Karras said his committee is "very concerned" about the safety of bicyclists enroute to Plamann Park. "We're so concerned, that if something happens (if bicyclists are involved in accidents) we want to be on record as having done all we could," Karras remarked.

Paul Fruend, Plamann Lake director, reported that of the more than 32,000 persons who have been at the park lake this year, 18,000 were 5 to 15 years old. A big percentage of them get to the park by bicycle, Fruend said.

There have been as few as five and as many as 600 bicycles at the lake on a given day, Fruend said.

County Planner Robert Stadel said surveys have shown that most of the bicyclists use the Meade Street route to the park.

Park use should increase considerably when park facilities are expanded and improved over the next couple of years, Karras said. That, he added, will add to the bicycle safety problem.

Several ways of meeting the problem were discussed at the meeting.

Supv. Al Lewandowski of Appleton proposed putting up more traffic regulation signs along Meade Street and Apple Creek Road and painting three-foot-wide stripes along each side of the roads to provide for bike lanes.

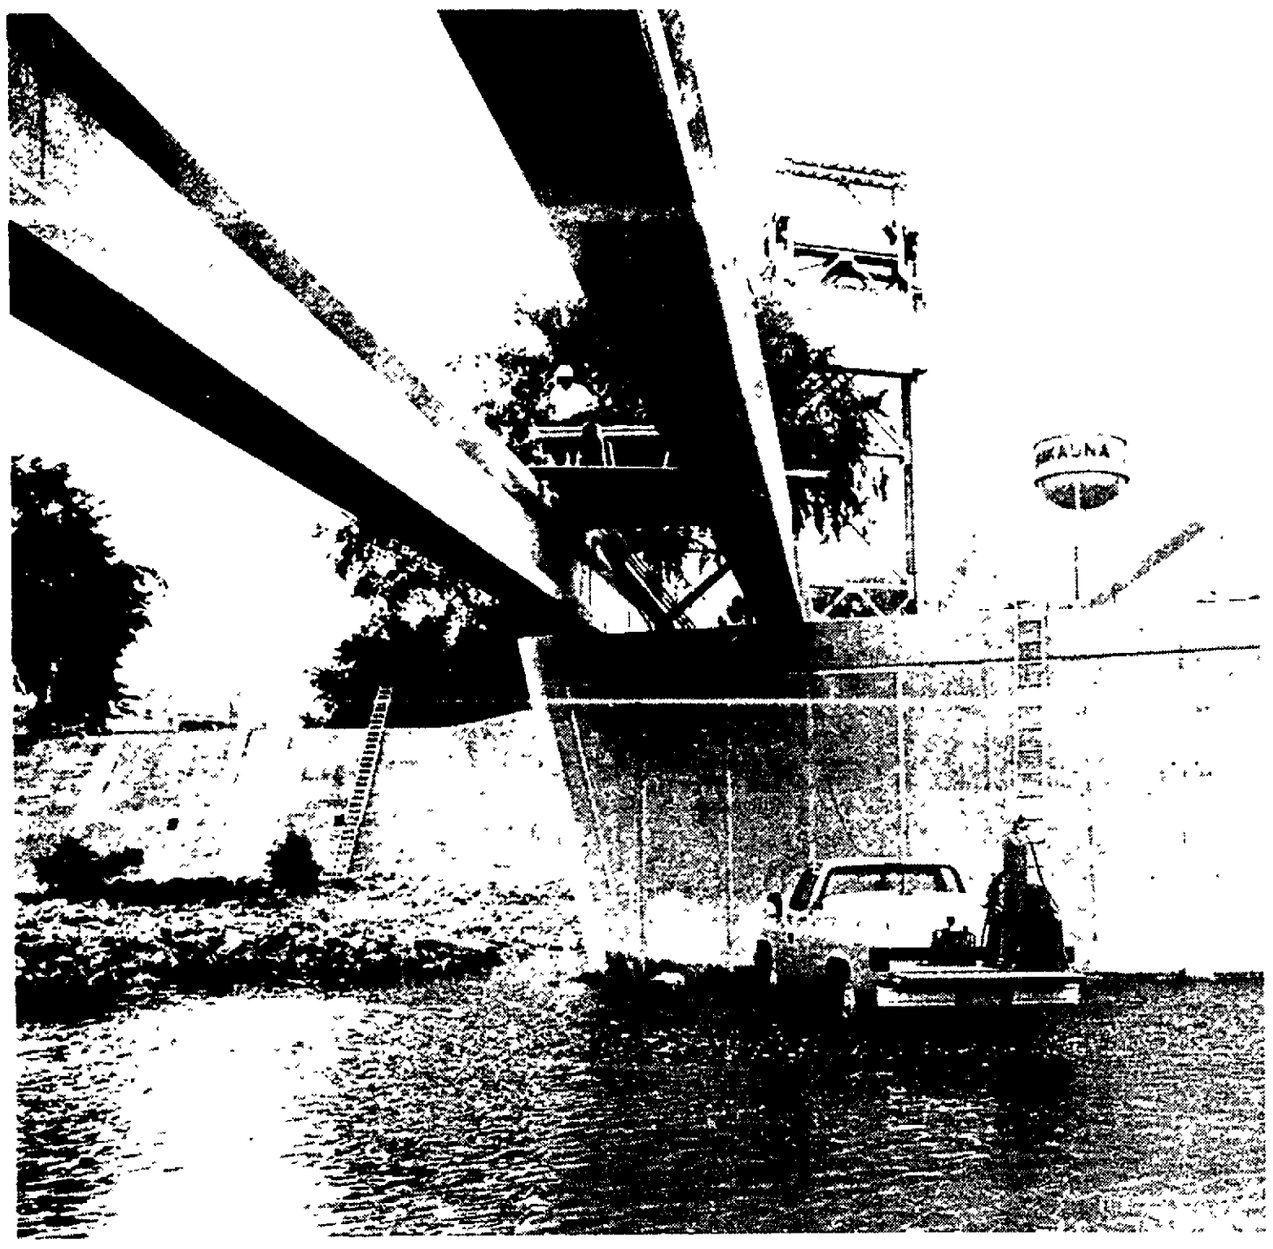
That wouldn't leave enough room for cars, said Robert Miller, Appleton director of public works.

Miller said the roads probably could be widened to allow for the bike lanes, but he believed the construction of bike paths in highway right of way would be a better, less costly move.

The path or "way," as he described it, could be on the order of a sidewalk, could follow the lay of the land and wouldn't have to be paved as long as another suitable hard surface was provided.

Edward Ziegler, a town of Grand Chute board supervisor, said he couldn't see how a path could be built along Apple Creek Road without having it interfere with drainage.

Livingston said plans are to reconstruct Apple Creek Road in a couple of years.



Bridge in progress

Concrete girders to support the roadway of the new Wisconsin Avenue bridge in Kaukauna are being put in place this week by crews of the Edward Kraemer and Sons Construction Co. Fifteen of the 90-foot girders will be used, five for each of the three spans over the river. Pouring of concrete for the bridge deck should begin next week. Despite a delay caused by high water that slowed work on the piers, the bridge is expected to be completed on schedule in late October or the first week in November. (Post-Crescent photo)

Speener hearing is Aug. 8 as attempt to delay it fails

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent staff writer

A public hearing to determine if there is sufficient cause to fire Outagamie County Health Center Supt. Eugene K. Speener will be held at 9 a.m. Aug. 8.

Health center trustees refused an attempt by Speener's attorney, Dennis Herrling, to delay the hearing at least another month during a Wednesday afternoon meeting that Herrling tried to move behind closed doors.

Herrling said he will have written, pre-hearing motions challenging the sufficiency of civil charges of misconduct, malfeasance, neglect, inefficiency and dereliction in office, brought against Speener last month by two private detectives who were hired to investigate him.

Trustees scheduled a hearing on the motions for 11 a.m. Aug. 2.

Herrling was unsuccessful in attempts to have the press and the public barred from Wednesday's meeting and he did not succeed in getting trustees John Wylie and Kelland Lathrop, both attorneys, to disqualify themselves from presiding at the Aug. 8 hearing.

Trustees also voted down a move by Herrling to force the two private detectives, Joseph Dresden and Ronald Marquardt, to post bonds.

They should be required to back up their charges with bonds in amounts sufficient to cover the cost of the hearing, including attorney fees, Herrling argued.

Trustee President Sylvester Esler wondered if the bond requirement shouldn't be extended to persons who "squawked to the investigators." Esler was referring to persons interviewed by the detectives.

Wylie, who joined Lathrop in voting against the bond requirement, said he did not believe that the charges were brought maliciously.

Jaycees seek Pierce ruling from council

Appleton Area Jaycees next week will begin circulating petitions asking that the City Council either approve their continued use of Pierce Park for Fourth of July civic celebrations or schedule a November referendum on the controversial issue.

The petitions, which are in the form of resolutions to the council, were being drafted today by attorney James Long, who represents the Jaycees in their dispute with a group of people who want the organization's celebration moved out of Pierce Park.

On July 9, a new group, the Committee of Concerned Citizens for the Protection of Appleton Parks, applied to the Appleton Parks and Recreation Commission for use of Pierce Park next July 4.

It was a move to block Jaycee use of the park next year. The committee, comprised largely of Pierce Park neighbors, said it intends to hold a youth-oriented civic celebration.

The parks and recreation commission does not act on park use permits until after Jan. 1. The committee of protesters was the first to request Pierce Park next July 4, but Jaycee President Richard Novitske said today his group has since applied.

Novitske said the petition action next week is an attempt to counteract the move by the protesters to keep them out of the park.

Jaycees will take the petitions door to door throughout the city, Novitske explained. Jaycees will receive the petitions during a meeting in City Park at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The petitions will be filed with the council next month, he said.

The council will be asked, via the petitions, to grant the Jaycees use of Pierce Park each July 4 weekend, Long explained.

If the council does not act, it would be required to schedule a public referendum on the question, Long said. A total of 2,577 signatures is needed on the petitions to force the referendum, he said.

The Jaycees and other interested persons and groups have been circulating other petitions seeking support for continued Jaycee use of the park. Petitions bearing about 3,800 signatures have been filed with City Clerk Elden J. Broehm.

In a related development, the cases against 11 persons charged with a total of 18 counts of illegally parking mobile homes and camper trailers in Pierce Park during the last July 4 celebration were continued to Aug. 2 so Long could file written arguments contesting the validity of the counts.

The 11, all carnival employes who were working at Pierce Park, have pleaded innocent and asked for jury trials.

Appleton police ticketed them after a park neighbor insisted that a city ordinance prohibiting trailers outside specially designated areas be enforced

Hit-and-run driver kills local man

MARSHFIELD — A 60-year-old Appleton man was killed almost instantly when he was struck by a hit-and-run auto as he crossed the city's main street about 11:20 p.m. Wednesday.

Dead at the scene from severe head and internal injuries was George C. Fitz, 2511 Brookdale Court. Police said he was approaching his car when he was struck by the southbound auto, which apparently was drag racing with another vehicle.

Fitz was thrown by the impact over the hood of his car into a meter post, from which his body rebounded into the street.

Police later apprehended three persons in one car, but were not successful in attempts to locate the second driver and vehicle.

"There is no doubt in my mind that we have the striking vehicle," said Capt. Don Haralson, head of the police department's detective bureau.

Haralson said the three men in the car, all brothers, had been drinking, but that a blood test was given to only one of them. He said the three had been uncooperative during questioning, and that the determination as to which one was driving had not been made.

He would not release their names, but said that two of them, ages 18 and 21, were from Marshfield, while the third, 33, was from St. Paul, Minn.

Haralson said he hoped the identity of the driver would be determined by later today, and that charges would be pressed against him.

Fitz was a native of Nekoosa and had lived in Appleton the past 25 years. He worked as a salesman for United Paper

2 counties eye bike trail to park

CHILTON — Authorization was given by the Calumet County Planning and Zoning Committee Wednesday night to have county planner Roland Tonn work with Outagamie County planner Robert Stadel in preparing possible bicycle routes to High Cliff State Park and estimated costs.

At a joint committee meeting, Nick Karras, Appleton, told the Calumet committee that the East-Central Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission was involved in establishing a master plan and the bicycle trails have to be worked out before funds could be obtained.

Because of the demand for trails to High Cliff, reported in a study made by Stadel, the meeting was arranged to see if a cooperative venture could be established. Tonn said there had been little demand for such trails in Calumet County. However, it was established by the group that there was a need, both as a safety factor as a coming mode of transportation and for recreational enjoyment.

Donald Schultz, Town of Harrison supervisor who recently asked the Calumet County Highway Safety Committee to establish bicycle trails from Appleton to High Cliff, said he felt that Winnebago County should be involved in view of the number of persons riding bicycles from the Neenah-Menasha area to High Cliff.

Mr. and Mrs. Schultz asked that the committee consider a route from the Appleton-Neenah-Menasha area in addition to one suggested by Outagamie County highway commissioner Clarence Brownson along State 55 from the College Avenue extension near Kaukauna. Brownson said the extension had sufficient right-of-way for bicycle trails.

Mrs. Schultz pointed out the many serious bicycle accidents in Calumet County and charged, "Chilton is not in the center of the problem area. We do not have enough contact to let you know we have a problem." She referred to the lack of toll-free telephone service between Harrison residents and the sheriff at Chilton. Karras stressed the need for early action, stating that $2 million had been allowed for each state for bicycle trails on every federal highway and 50 per cent of the cost of preparing the a study was also available.

The possibility of establishing paths which could be used for bicycles in summer and snowmobiles in winter was discussed but was not compatible in view of the fact that bicycles needed paved paths and snowmobiles unpaved routes. Mrs. Judy Hebbe, a member of the Outagamie panel, noted that from maps presented, each county had snowmobile routes established in areas which were not demanding bicycle trails.

Calumet committee members said they were afraid they would not be able to convince the county board to approve

Wet weather

The umbrellas were up in downtown Appleton, shielding shoppers and businessmen from the persistent rain, amounting to almost an inch this morning alone. There were different sizes and shapes of rain cover, but an old standby black umbrella seems to serve the best for James Balliet of Appleton, who didn't let the weather stop his walk down College Avenue. Neenah child critically hurt; at burn center

NEENAH — A 2-year-old Neenah boy is in critical condition today at the burn center at St. Mary Hospital in Milwaukee with second and third degree burns over 75 per cent of his body after a fire Wednesday in the basement of his home.

Tom Rohloff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Rohloff, 1508 Ames St., was found badly burned in the basement by Neenah Fire Department fire fighters responding to a 9:55 a.m. call. The boy's mother, Nancy Rohloff, also was burned, mostly on the hands.

The boy was taken to Theda Clark Memorial Hospital by the fire department ambulance, and was transferred to Milwaukee.

The suspected cause of the fire is a can of gasoline that was found alongside a burned plastic kiddie car. The fire department speculated that the boy was playing with the car when he decided to pour the gasoline into it and it somehow ignited.

The investigation is continuing pending the return of the boy's parents from the burn center.

Appleton woman bound over for murder trial

OSHKOSH — Mrs. Noreen Kelly of Appleton was bound over to Circuit Court for trial on a first degree murder charge late Wednesday after a preliminary hearing in Winnebago County Court.

Mrs. Kelly, 45, 602 S. Mayflower Drive, is charged in the shooting death of Alvin Manteufel, 68, at his rural Neenah home on Aug. 22, 1973.

Wednesday's preliminary hearing ended about 10:30 p.m. after 19 witnesses had been called to testify by Asst. Dist. Atty. Robert Vander Loop, who is prosecuting the case for the state. The witnesses detailed the chain of events on the evening of the shooting and subsequent investigation by county sheriff's department personnel.

Through questioning of witnesses, Vander Loop placed Mrs. Kelly at the scene of the shooting. Several witnesses testified that they saw no one besides the woman and Manteufel enter or leave the residence on the evening of the shooting. However, defense attorney James Long of Appleton attempted to establish through cross-examination of witnesses that anyone could have been hiding in the home and fired the shot.

Mrs. Penny Wandahsega of Neenah, who had been an upstairs tenant at the Manteufel home at 1129 E. Fairview Road, testified that the home was always left unlocked. She also testified that she saw no one else on the premises on Aug. 22 and that she had been downstairs to use the telephone about three hours before the shooting and saw no one.

Mrs. Kelly has claimed that she was in another room of the house when she heard the gunshot, then found Manteufel running around in the kitchen. Manteufel was found by sheriff's officers, face down on the kitchen floor. He had been shot once in the back. The bullet exited through his chest, went through a kitchen table and was found on the kitchen floor. The suspected murder weapon was found under the front porch of the home. The gun belonged to Mrs. Kelly.

Vander Loop attempted to establish a motive in the shooting by entering as evidence a copy of the last will and testament of Manteufel. It listed Mrs. Kelly as the sole benefactor of Manteufel's estate. That will is being held in county probate court. A legal ruling on whether it will be honored is being withheld until after the Kelly trial.

The bind-over came at the end of Wednesday's testimony when County Judge James Sarres ruled a crime had probably been committed and that probable cause exists to bring the defendant to trial. Preliminary hearings are held only to establish probable cause. The trial will be scheduled in Circuit Court.

A first degree murder charge was originally filed against Mrs. Kelly in October of 1973 after a seven-week investigation into the shooting. Former Winnebago County Judge James V. Sitter, however, dismissed the case, citing insufficient foundation for the complaint.

After charges were reopened May 24 against his client, Long filed a writ of prohibition with the Wisconsin Supreme Court, asking the court to prohibit the case from continuing. Long charged that the case was reopened only for purposes of harassment against Mrs. Kelly. But the state's high court denied the motion and proceedings were scheduled again.

County Judge William H. Carver, in whose court the preliminary hearing was held, disqualified himself from the case in May, since he was the district attorney who filed the original murder charge against Mrs. Kelly. Sarres was substituted.

Mrs. Kelly had at one time lived in the upstairs apartment of the Manteu-

If allowed, Bergstrom's own plant cheaper, sooner

BY PETER BACH
Post-Crescent staff writer

A Bergstrom Paper Company executive's testimony dominated the first day of a hearing here to deal with issues surrounding the firm's request for a modification of a 1969 pollution abatement order so it can construct its own wastewater treatment facility.

Richard Wand, administrative vice president, said the company has done preliminary studies on two concepts for providing its own on-site secondary treatment facility, including the Zurn-Attisholz system in use by Wisconsin Tissue Mills.

Both the Swiss process and one designed by Union-Carbide were found, the preliminary studies show, to offer treatment capabilities better than those specified by the firm in its discharge permit on file with the Department of Natural Resources and the operational and capital costs for utilizing them are far less than if the company entered the municipal system, Wand testified.

Either of the two on-site systems could be operational by mid-1976 which would be earlier than if the firm linked up to the municipal system, providing the local treatment plant is expanded according to a current schedule.

Wand's testimony came during the afternoon of a hearing at whose outset it was revealed formally for the first time that Bergstrom would definitely construct its own facility if permitted to do so.

At the beginning of the hearing, David Beckwith, from the Milwaukee law firm representing Bergstrom, said the company "will opt out of the system" if given the opportunity to do so. The firm feels it still has that option under the industrial user contract while city and sewerage commission officials, many of whom had not been called to testify as of Wednesday, disagree. The commission believes the company cannot legally release itself from the contract.

Whether or not it is in the public interest to allow Bergstrom an option at this point, whether the firm made an irrevocable choice to participate in the municipal treatment system and thus should now be prevented from challenging its discharge permit and whether the DNR is precluded from ordering the firm to link up with the municipal plant by virtue of the sewer user contract are the key issues in the case as outlined by hearing examiner, Charles LeVeque.

The hearing was expected to run at least through today with resumption of cross examination of Wand by commission attorney William Giese.

LeVeque said Wednesday that by law, he must come back with a decision within 90 days from the close of the hearing.

Company and municipal attorneys listed a total of more than two dozen possible witnesses although it was uncertain whether all of them would be called to the witness stand.

At one point Wednesday, Beckwith said the firm would appeal any decision that concludes Bergstrom no longer has an option to build its own plant.

Under direct questioning from Beckwith, Wand testified the firm reconsidered its position because of federal funding delays, sharp price boosts, the availability of new technology and the firm's inroads into water recycling.

In testimony that was later supported by an official of the Canadiian consulting firm licensed to design the Zurn-Attisholz system in the United States and a representative of Union Carbide, Wand said both systems could be constructed on a relatively small plot.

The existence of optional withdrawal points in the industrial user contract were also mentioned and how they figured into Bergstrom's decision, including in light of recently opened bids which came in far higher than expected.

Wand said the company has not decided on an exact location but had several areas in the vicinity of its downtown plant, including its current fill area along the lakeshore, in mind as possibilities.

No cost estimates were given for the project in its entirety. However, Wand said the company has determined that the capital and operating costs of constructing its own facility would total about $500,000 per year compared to $1.4 million for joining with the municipal system.

The company would discharge effluent after secondary treatment to Little Lake Butte des Morts and in response to cross examination from Giese, Wand said, "Our intention is not to get back to the municipal system."

Wand, under questioning from Giese, said it was possible, however, that at some future date, Bergstrom would want to discharge a small amount of effluent from its converting mill on U.S. 41 to the municipal system.

Currently, the company discharges effluent after primary treatment at the downtown mill directly to the lake, at an amount Wand said was 4.2 million gallons per day.

Robert Mussallen, an attorney for the DNR, said from the documentation filed Wednesday it was apparent Bergstrom intended initially to join with the municipal plant but that it was under severe pressure to do so.

"The company did not sign the (industrial user) contract without the presence of outside pressures," Massallen stated.

Beckwith reacted to thisp saying joint treatment was the "preferred method" in 1971. "Maybe it was — in 1971," Beckwith said. "It's just not today at a million-four."

Michael Borge, Menasha's bond counsel who was called to the witness stand by City Atty. Richard Steffens, stated it would be "foolish to attempt to offer bonds" under circumstances where Bergstrom was not firmly committed to being in the plant and he said he would advise both city councils of this.

An original DNR abatement order in 1969 gave Bergstrom the option of building its own plant or joining with the municipal plant. There was a Dec. 31, 1972 deadline. On Nov. 21, 1972, Bergstrom signed the agreement with the commission providing for joint treatment.

Neenah RR study starts next month

NEENAH — The railroad relocation study to be conducted here by a Chicago consulting firm should start in about five weeks, after a contract is completed and signed.

George Bauman, city planner, said today the contract is being prepared by DeLeeuw, Cather and Company of Chicago. That firm has been hired to study the conflicts between street and rail traffic in Neenah and in Oshkosh, and to provide recommendations to ease the problems.

Neenah and Oshkosh officials met with representatives of the State highway commission and the Chicago consulting firm Wednesday to establish contract guidelines. Bauman said the cities gave the firm a contract sample on which they will base the final contract. Separate contracts will be prepared for the two cities.

Bauman called it a "relatively difficult contract." He said one of the main specifications will be that the consulting firm, to the best of its ability will conduct the studies in the two cities simultaneously to avoid duplication of travel and other expenses.

The contracts, as prepared by the Chicago firm, will be returned to the cities in two weeks. They will then be sent to the state highway commission, where another two weeks will be allowed for review. One more week will then be needed to obtain the necessary signatures on the contracts, making the entire process five weeks in length.

The studies are expected to start immediately after that, and should take about six months.

The state is involved in the projects because 90 per cent federal funding which has been allocated is being administered through the state highway commi sion. The federal highway administration still hasn't given its approval to the 90 per cent funding level, but a state spokesman said that is merely a formality.

Total cost of the relocation study in Neenah is expected to be $43,000 and the Oshkosh study will cost about $50,000. The Neenah City Council on July 3 authorized a city expenditure of $4,300 to cover the city's 10 per cent share of the study cost.

King sees alternate plan for ag center remodeling

OSHKOSH — Despite the county board's refusal to go along with a $125,000 remodeling of Sunnyview sanitorium, County Executive Orrin King said today that he planned to file an alternate plan to insure that the building can be upgraded to a point where it'll serve a useful purpose.

King said he was going to ask for $8,000 to carry out repairs which are needed immediately so that the portion of the building previously occupied by the guidance clinic could be used for office space.

The county board last week, after debating the question for nearly an hour, decided that it didn't want to spend $125,000 to convert the building to an agriculture center.

However, King along with Supv. Ronald Hanche, building and grounds committee chairman, insist that the building is still sound and are working out the details of an interim repair and possible use program.

They argue that the building is structurally sound and with a minimum of repairs, including landscaping to keep the gutters and downspouts, it can be a functional building.

Although there's no plan for using either the 4,500 square feet which had been occupied by the guidance clinic or the rest of the 14,000 square foot building, King suggested today that it could be used for county office space or could be rented out. "Either way, I don't think the building should be torn down," he said.

"It has a lot of things going for it. The roof is sound, there's a new heating plant and available parking space and it has a central location," King explained.

Built nearly 60 years ago, Sunnyview had been operated in a joint venture with Fond du Lac County as a sanatorium. A couple of years ago, Winnebago County bought out Fond du Lac's share and remodeled a portion of the building for the guidance center which had been located in the WNAM building in Neenah.

The guidance center has now been moved to remodeled quarters in the basement of the rehabilitation pavilion and Sunnyview is standing empty.

The plan, defeated by the county board, was to convert it into an agriculture center to house the University of Wisconsin extension offices plus other stae and federal departments which were related to agriculture.

Opposition to the plan generated from Supv. Herman Brandt who argued that spending $125,000 on an old building was ill-advised since the county could build a new one for about the same cost.

In turning down the bids, the board instructed the building and founds committee to caucus with the agriculture committee to work out a plan to provide quarters for an agricultural center. Hansche said today that he had not been contacted by the ag committee but expected to hear prior to a meeting scheduled early next month.

3rd cadet in Menasha police dept. program

MENASHA — The police cadet program is in its second year here, and a third cadet has joined the training.

The program also includes the funding of a cadet returning from last year's session.

The program, which is funded through the Wisconsin Council Criminal Justice, provides on-the-job training for persons who have completed academic police studies.

Two cadets are provided for by the project which first began last July. At that time Robert Stanke, Menasha, and Becky Dorn, Hortonville, signed on with the Menasha police program.

Stanke remains with the program although Miss Dorn left the department upon completion of her training to seek full time police employment.

The department's new cadet this year is Joe Lingnofski, Menasha, who comes to the program from the FBI training school in Washington, D.C.

Under the program, the cadets begin working behind the dispatch desk with the sergeant on duty, learning to answer the phones and dispatch patrolmen.

Next the young trainees accompany a patrolman on traffic duty — operating the manual controls on the Racine Street bridge, etc. They travel in squad cars with on-duty patrolmen and act as observers.

Eventually the cadets assist on investigations of break-ins and complaints which are routinely investigated.

Back in the station, the trainees work on the files, process traffic accident reports and other matters.

By this fall, the cadets will be trained in an additional task — monitoring the new emergency communication system, taking calls requesting ambulances, police and fire crews.

Police Chief Roman Rappert says the program is a boon to the department, providing additional personnel at moderate cost.

The cadets would be ideally fitted into the Menasha police department should positions become available, Rappert said, because they are well versed and familiar with procedures in handling the day-to-day work of the force.

"It's very good, real helpful," Rappert said of the cadet training. He said he would be interested in future hiring of a trained cadet. "Then all I have to do is send him to rookie school for 200 hours and he can start in full-time."

Rookie school is the special training newly hired police officers must complete at Fox Valley Technical Institute before becoming full-fledged law enforcers.

A similar program is in operation in Oshkosh.

Kimberly assessment set at $13.8 million

KIMBERLY — Assessed value of the village, exclusive of manufacturing land and improvements and manufacturing stock, for 1974 has been set at $13,825,800, according to Assessor William Ruf, who reported the figures at the conclusion of meetings of the board of review.

Last year's assessment for the same categories on the roll amounted to $13,102,280. Assessment of manufacturing facilities was taken out of the hands of the local assessor this year and is being handled by the state. It is expected that the village will learn state assessment figures early in October.

Value of manufacturing land in the 1973 assessment roll was set at $291,675; manufactuing improvements at $14,796,525; and manufacturing stock, listed as personal property, at $1,588,390.

Residential land value in 1974 was listed at $2,486,075 and residential improvements at $9,553,300 compared to $2,476,150 and $9,229,900, respectively in 1973.

Value of mercantile land was increased from $183,175 to $218,600 and mercantile improvements from $818,050 to $1,063,275. Value of agricultural land was constant at $6,250 and no agricultural improvements are listed on the roll.

Personal property assessment shows merchants' stock valued at $339,700 in 1974 compared to $157,375 in 1973, machinery and tools value dropped to $4,780 from $86,310, furniture, fixtures and equipment increased to $150,820 from $144,920 and other equipment increased to $3,000 from $150.

Winds whip rain into area during night

The rain Fox Valley residents hoped would break the area's recent hot spell finally arrived while most people were sleeping Wednesday night.

At midnight, it had not rained, but by 6 a.m. there had been .69 inch in Appleton accompanied by an average 11-mile-an-hour wind, with gusts to 23 miles an hour between 3 and 4 a.m. The strongest winds occurred between 6 and 7 a.m., when average winds of 20 miles an hour peaked at 34 miles an hour.

Reports of damage in the area were minimal. A utility pole and live wires were knocked down, apparently by wind, at the corner of Algoma and E. Pine streets in New London, but that pole appeared to have been partially rotted.

The only other specific report of wind damage was a broken branch at the corner of Sixth and Elm streets in Appleton.

With a steady rain falling at 9 a.m., rainfall, reported by Wisconsin Michigan Power Co., was at .90 inch.

bicycle trails if they were localized, noting that supervisors from areas not included in the plans would not support them. Only two of the Calumet County Planning and Zoning Committee members are county supervisors. Citizen members are appointed for seven-year terms.

Karras stated that the Outagamie committee had been working on the bicycle trail problem for three years and was being criticized for "doing nothing." He said he felt the Calumet County Board would have to act on requests, and if requests for other areas were made, it should take that into consideration. The planners were left to work out plans for trails on roadside rights-of-way or cross-county routes to be presented at another committee meeting in about two weeks.

should be required to post bonds," Esler remarked.

Last March, trustees hired attorney James Bayorgeon to head a Speener investigation, after Speener refused their request to resign.

On Wednesday, trustees voted to pass over Corp. Counsel William Schuh and have Bayorgeon represent them at Speener's hearing.

Wylie told Schuh there was "no slight intended," and added that the hearing was a special matter, outside the normal business of the corporation counsel's office. Wylie also thought Schuh might not have time to handle the matter.

Objections were voiced by Esler and Herrling. Esler recalled that attorney John Menn had told trustees recently that he could not represent them on another matter because, according to a 1944 attorney general's opinion, they could not hire outside legal counsel.

However, Lathrop said he found a state statute that permits them to go beyond the corporation counsel's office for assistance. Wylie agreed with Lathrop's findings.

Herrling said it was a conflict of interest to have Bayorgeon handle both the investigation and the prosecution.

The county board gave trustees $2,500 to conduct the Speener investigation. Bayorgeon has told trustees his investigative bill does not approach that amount.

Herrling reminded Wylie that several months ago Wylie stated publicly that he had information about Speener that might warrant his firing. If he does have such information, Herrling argued, he should disqualify himself as a "judge" in the Speener case.

If a judge or a juror was given such information, he would withdraw, Herrling said.

Wylie said Lathrop also was present when the unnamed source volunteered the information, but he said neither of them pursued the matter. Instead, the information was given to Bayorgeon. Wylie and Lathrop said they had no intention of disqualifying themselves.

Herrling will be given a list of witnesses expected to testify at the hearing. He said he wants to examine them adversely before the hearing.

Many of the witnesses reportedly will be past and present health center employes.

Herrling wanted Wednesday's meeting closed because, he argued, personnel would be discussed. Speener, who was not present, did not waive his right to executive session, Herrling said.

Esler made a motion to close the meeting, but the other two trustees agreed with Schuh that the meeting was called to set a hearing date and to discuss hearing procedures and, therefore, could not legally be closed.

On June 13, shortly after receiving the detectives' written charges against Speener, trustees set a mandatory public hearing for June 26. But they granted Speener a delay.

Herrling asked for at least another month's delay so he could have sufficient time to investigate the charges. Wylie and Lathrop insisted that Herrling has had enough time to investigate.

Neenah man indicted; charge is transporting loads of stolen steel

A Fox Cities man was indicted by a federal grand jury in Milwaukee Wednesday on a charge of interstate transportation of stolen steel.

The indictment named Gerald A. Kersten, 45, who recently has lived in Appleton and Neenah. A recent address was 304 Oak St., Neenah.

Kersten was charged with transporting two semitrailers of stolen steel, valued at $20,000, between Harrisburg, Pa., and Fremont.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation conducted the probe.

Six AHS-East musicians return, tired but happy, from Swiss school

Six Appleton High School-East musicians recently returned from what one of them termed "the experience of my life," attending the Rivelli International School of Music in Glion, Switzerland as members of a select group of Wisconsin student musicians who made up part of a national high school band that numbered 101.

Ruth Bravick, Heidi Ellefson, Bill Koopman, Liz Kulhavy, Joanie Orbison and Linda Sandkofer, the six East musicians, were traveling ambassadors of goodwill through music from June 27, when they left Chicago's O'Hare Airport for Geneva, Switzerland, until July 12, when they returned to Appleton "exhausted, but extremely happy."

The unique opportunity which allowed them to travel throughout Switzerland, Luxembourg, parts of Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands, came their way through the work and efforts of their director, Tom Jacobs.

Earlier this year, Jacobs was asked to organize an all-Wisconsin high school band to attend the music school and tour, "but economic problems encountered by individuals and groups throughout the state made that impossible," the director said. "So the all-state band was formed, containing many Wisconsin students, and others from throughout the nation."

The four Appleton flutists, Bravick, Ellefson, Orbison and Sandkofer, bass clarinetist Kulhavy and basoonist Koopman were among students from as far west as the Dakotas and as far east as the Atlantic seaboard to attend the lessons and concerts and tour as Rivelli's musicians. Rivelli is best known as band director emeritus for the University of Michigan Wolverine Marching Band.

"Our first rehearsal was the day we arrived," Sandkofer explained, "and three days later, we played our first concert as a group." The 101 students traveled together to Switzerland from Chicago, and got to know each other as friends. Getting to know each other as musicians took a little longer.

"Everybody in the band was really serious," Bravick said. "It was obvious from the first day. There was no joking when it came to your music. We were there for a reason and we all knew it, but that didn't make it any less fun."

A typical day for the musicians while in training at Glion would begin with a wake-up call at 7 a.m., followed by a leisurely breakfast from 7:30 to 8:30, "which you sometimes skipped if you wanted a few extra minutes to sleep, but you always regretted it if you did," and class lessons and sectional rehearsals from 8:45 to 10:15. Rehearsals for the entire group ran from 10:40 to 12:30, with no break from musical events again until lunch. After lunch, which "never seemed as leisurely as breakfast," according to Orbison, there were more sectionals, and when there were no concerts, additional full band rehearsals for the remainder of the afternoon.

Afternoons of concert performances were much less structured for the students, but, all in all, they had little free time to explore, and never really got over the feeling that they were "tourists" in the countries they visited.

Concerts were usually outside, often in the beautiful parks in the countries the young musicians visited.

All of the students agreed that the most unique musical experience was the opportunity to work under Rivelli. "We were all scared to death of him at first," one girl remembered. "Some of us were still scared to death of him even at last," one of her companion flutists countered.

"I'll admit being a bit worried about my playing at first," Ellefson said. "There was a wide range of abilities." All agreed that first chair players were "really outstanding," but they felt they could hold their own with the training they'd had in Appleton.

"You'll never have that degree of seriousness in a high school band," Koopman said. His instructor agreed. "People wouldn't have applied if they weren't really serious and interested," Jacobs said. "These students went because they had a high level of ability and enough interest to want to improve their musicianship as well as seeing Europe. At least I hope that's why they went."

"Everybody wanted to go home the first day," Kulhavy remembered. "We'd been up for 32 hours straight, and it was strange being in a foreign country where you couldn't speak the language."

"Once you got used to it, though," Sandkofer reminded her, "the country didn't seem so foreign and the language didn't sound so strange."

Probably the most fantastic experience of the trip, Koopman explained, "was the attitude of the people we encountered. It was being treated like a professional. You'd go into a concert after playing through a number once, and be expected to do it perfectly, like the best professional. Sure, it was hard work, but the end result made the effort worth it."

For Ellefson, the most exciting part of the concert trip, "outside the music," was meeting new people, both other Americans and Europeans. "We met kids from all over and we were working toward a common end, something we could all understand, no matter where in the United States we were from. The Europeans enjoyed our music, but music is universal."

"People look different and talk different and act different, but in the end they're all just people," Orbison said.

Koopman, Kulhavy and Ellefson, all seniors, and Bravick, a junior, will return to the East band in the fall. Orbison will be a freshman at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Whenever they get together now, they remember the waiter in Switzerland who brought them orange pop when they asked for orange juice, candy stores in Switzerland, their visit to see Ursulla Paerli, a former East foreign exchange student from Switzerland who stayed with the Orbisons, strange hotels, teachers and the different customs they found in Europe. They'll probably be remembering it all for a long time.

Appleton seeks permit to fill, build outfall

Appleton has submitted an application to the Department of Natural Resources to construct an outfall in and place fill along the Fox River at the wastewater treatment plant.

Objections to or statements on aspects of the proposed work should be mailed to reach the office of the Department of the Army's District Corps of Engineers, 219 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill., 60604, on or before Aug. 14.

The proposed outfall, which is a large pipe 60 inches in diameter and 300 feet long, would convey the treated sewage for dispersal into the river.

The city is also seeking permission to dredge about 2,600 cubic yards of material out of the riverbed to accommodate the pipe and then backfill the trench with about 2,135 cubic yards of gravel and stone. The rest of the dredged material will be used as fill for a roadway.

The decision whether to issue a permit will be based on an evaluation of the probable impact of the proposed activity on the public interest. That decision will reflect the national concern for both protection and utilization of important resources.

Kaukauna to get estimates on road work

KAUKAUNA — As a result of a meeting with members of the Outagamie County Highway Commission Monday, Mayor Robert La Plante has instructed City Engineer Robert Natrop to secure cost estimates for installation of curb and storm sewers needed on county trunks K, Q and Z within the city limits.

The mayor had requested the county to include improvements on these county trunks in its 1975 budget, but the county board said other improvements should be made prior to making road improvements.

La Plante said that after Natrop secures cost estimates, he would call a public hearing to learn whether property owners along the proposed county trunks would be willing to pay assessments for the curb, gutter and sewer.

If property owners reject the proposal, it will indicate they do not want the road improved and the city then will ask the county to place a smooth overlay along County Trunk K, said La Plante. He said any improvements by the city would have to be carried out in 1975 before the county would consider major road improvements.

County commissioners informed La Plante that they would make a personal inspection of the roads on which he was seeking improvements and notify the city of their findings.

La Plante said he also questioned the extension of County Trunk CE from State 55 to County Trunk Q and was informed that work on the extension was scheduled to get under way later this year and be completed in 1975.

La Plante said that the extension of CE was of particular importance to the city since it provided a second access to the Beaulieu Hill area. Access to the area is limited to Dodge Street over a bridge spanning Konkapot Creek.

If traffic on this street should be disrupted, access to the Beaulieu Hill area could only be made by completely circling the city to County Trunk Z and then approaching from the east.

NLRB slates two elections, hearing and trial

Two union representation elections, a hearing and a trial affecting area companies have been announced by the National Labor Relations Board 30th Region.

The Retail Store Employe Union, Local 214, an affiliate of the Retail Clerks International Association, AFL-CIO, hopes to represent service workers from three units of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. in Green Bay and Neenah. The 18 employes affected will vote on the matter next Wednesday.

Employes from the Hillshire Farm Co., a division of Consolidated Farm Corp., will decide whether they wish to be represented in an election slated for Aug. 23 at the New London plant. Two unions, Amalgamated Meatcutters, Local 248, and the Teamsters, Local 563, have entered a joint petition to represent the 280 production and maintenance workers.

The hearing for possible union representation of two truckdrivers of Tri-County Distributors, Inc., 724 S. Outagamie St., Appleton, by Teamsters Local 565 will be at 10 a.m. Aug. 7 at the Outagamie County Courthouse annex.

Teamsters Local 563, which represents employes of Zaug's Vending and Food Service, 4100 W. Wisconsin Ave., has been charged with "restraining and coercing employes." The complaint states that the union threatened employes by telling them if they did not join the union at the reduced entrance fee of $25 by March 15, the fee would be increased to $50.

A trial in the matter is slated for 1 p.m. next Wednesday at the Outagamie County Courthouse annex.

Calumet to raise permit fees to offset costs to taxpayers for hearings

CHILTON — In view of the cost of public hearing connected with the Calumet County Planning and Zoning Committee, the panel has recommended a change in permit fees to help offset the cost to the taxpayers.

A $2 building permit fee is the only cost connected with the zoning ordinance now.

After considerable discussion at a recent meeting, it was recommended that the building permit fee be raised to $5; conditional use permit, variance of appeal and amendment to ordinance fees be $25 each; and sign permit, $2.

It was noted that the average publication cost to the planning and zoning committee in 1973 was $55, which did not include per diem and mileage and preparation expenses for a hearing.

The average cost for the zoning board of admustments from 1968 through June of this year is $111 per meeting of $66 a case. This will increase now that there are five members on this committee.

Kaukauna official asks for 2 more siren alarms

KAUKAUNA — Civil Defense Director Norman Meinert has make a formal request to Howard J. Rathburn, Outagamie County director of Emergency Government Services, for two additional emergency warning siren systems for the city.

His request was made after the board of education authorized installation of such alert systems atop Victor Haen and Electa Quinney schools.

Meinert said the request was made due to expansion of the city on the south and north sides and development of areas on the outskirts of the city. It has been noted that existing sirens on the municipal building and on Nicolet School are not audible in remote areas, particularly when winds are blowing strongly.

Impeachment views revealed

case should be decided according to law.

If fairness is not the overriding factor in the epic proceedings, said Wiggins, "we would be doing a greater violence to the Constitution than any misconduct alleged of Richard Nixon."

Wiggins was the first of 27 committee members remaining to make opening statements in the debate on a proposed two-article recommendation of impeachment.

If the committee approves impeachment in a vote expected this weekend, then the full House of Representatives must decide whether to send the matter on to the Senate for trial.

Wiggins told his colleagues it was "not too late for me to challenge" whether they should sit in the proceeding if they have formed a preconceived notion Nixon's guilt or innocence.

But despite his challenge, the committee was believed likely to vote impeachment, though the margin of such a vote remains to be determined.

The committee opened its historic debate Wednesday night before a nationwide television and radio audience that heard Rep. Charles W. Sandman Jr., R-N.J., claim "There are sufficient votes here for an impeachment resolution.

"Everyone knows that. There is no use kidding ourselves about it," he said.

Sandman, who lined up against impeachment, was one of 11 committee members who gave their views in a televised presentation of the historic proceedings.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr.'s schedule for the 38-member committee calls for concluding general debate tonight and moving onto actual consideration of articles of impeachment Friday. That schedule suffered a slight setback last night when a bomb scare forced a 47-minute delay.

The threat, telephoned to the Capitol switchboard, forced Rodino to empty the packed room while police searched fruitlessly for a bomb. Later, after Rodino had recessed the proceedings for the night and the hearing room had almost emptied, a second bomb threat was received. Again nothing was found.

The most explosive item in the room was a resolution offered by Rep. Harold D. Donohue, D-Mass., calling for Nixon's impeachment on two broad articles, one based on the Watergate cover-up and the other charging him with abusing his powers of office.

The proposed articles, still subject to refinements, were drafted after day-long negotiations between pro-impeachment Democrats and seven fence-sitting members — four Republicans and three Southern Democrats.

Neither side would say publicly that the articles as presented represent an agreement, but one participant in the negotiations said he expects the seven undecided members to support at least one of them. That would produce a 26-12 vote in favor of impeachment.

The Watergate article accuses Nixon of acting "directly and personally and through his close subordinates and agents" to obstruct the investigation of the Watergate break-in.

It lists nine specific acts it says Nixon directed to carry out the cover-up, including the payment of hush money, the suppression of evidence, the misuse of the CIA and the making of "false or misleading public statements in his capacity as President for the purpose of deceiving the people of the United States ..."

The abuse of power article charges Nixon with authorizing illegal wiretaps, establishing a special investigative unit in the White House to engage in unlawful activities — such as the break-in of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office — and with interfering with the administration of the Internal Revenue Service and the FBI.

Both articles, and the specific acts cited in them, follow closely the major concerns in the impeachment inquiry of Rep. Thomas F. Railsback, R-Ill., in whose office the uncommitted members drafted their proposals for submission to the pro-impeachment group.

Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., said he already has been convinced. "I have concluded, after careful consideration of the evidence that President Nixon must be impeached and removed from office," he said.

Rep. Henry P. Smith III, R-N.Y., dispelled the idea he would vote for impeachment by saying the evidence was not sufficiently clear and convincing for him except on the single, narrow issue of secret bombing of Cambodia, which is not included in the proposed articles.

Busing . . .

and Byron R. White.

Besides its impact in Detroit, the decision could affect schools in Louisville and Jefferson County, Ky., which were ordered by a federal judge Tuesday to merge in order to achieve better racial balance.

It will have more indirect affects in many other cities.

Roth's decision had called for busing of pupils in a three-county area around Detroit. It was appealed by Michigan officials and by suburban school districts, but not by the Detroit district, which is about 64 per cent black.

The same question came before the Supreme Court last year in a case arising in Richmond, Va.

The court deadlocked 4-4 in the Richmond case, with Justice Lewis Powell, a former member of the Richmond school board, abstaining.

A district court order for cross-district busing in the Richmond area was overturned by a federal appeals court. The tie vote by the Supreme Court had the effect of upholding the appeals court order barring cross-district busing in the Richmond area but did not establish any precedent for future cases.

Today's decision does set a legal precedent.

Burger said it seemed clear that Roth and the U.S. Circuit Court in Cincinnati, which upheld his decision, "shifted the primary focus from a Detroit remedy to the metropolitan area only because of their conclusion that total desegregation of Detroit would not produce the racial balance which they perceived as desirable."

"Entirely apart from the logistical and other serious problems attending large-scale transportation of students, the consolidation would give rise to an array of other problems in financing and operating this new school system," Burger said.

He said the problems would include the authority of the present school boards, equality of tax levies, validity of bonds and the control of curriculum.

"To approve the remedy ordered by the court would impose on the outlying districts, not shown to have committed any constitutional violation, a wholly impermissible remedy," said Burger.

Burger said that even if state officials were responsible for segregation, as held by the lower court, "it does not follow that an interdistrict remedy is constitutionally justified or required."

Privilege . . .

wrote Burger.

Then the court turned to the specific case at hand, in which Nixon sought to resist an order to produce records of White House conversations wanted as potential evidence in the Watergate cover-up trial.

The court has ruled in the past that secret military and diplomatic information may be shielded from examination in the courts. But in the Watergate tapes, it said, national security is not involved.

Thus, it said, the President's claim rests on "no more than a generalized claim of the public interest in confidentiality of nonmilitary and nondiplomatic discussions."

That is not enough, Burger wrote.

"We must weigh the importance of the general privilege of confidentiality of presidential communications in performance of his responsibilities against the inroads of such a privilege on the fair administration of criminal justice."

Weighing this "confrontation with other values," the court decided in favor of "the twofold aim of criminal justice ... that guilt shall not escape or innocence suffer."

In 1952, rejecting the late President Harry S. Truman's claim of power to seize struck steel mills in wartime, the court said that "the founders of this nation entrusted the lawmaking power to the Congress alone in both good and bad times."

In Wednesday's decision, the court added to this that the powers vested in the judicial branch "can no more be shared with the executive branch than the chief executive, for example, can share with the judiciary the veto power."

Drought cracks

Searing heat and lack of rainfall spell nothing but trouble for Texas farmers this year. This picture of dried, cracked ground in a cornfield near Cedar Hill, Tex., can be multiplied many times throughout west Texas. About 800,000 acres of planted cotton is also expected to be abandoned, at a loss of $166 million. (AP wirephoto) ing them available to Jaworski.

Appearing before newsmen and television cameras at the White House press center in nearby Laguna Beach on Wednesday afternoon, St. Clair spoke of "the time-consuming process of reviewing the tapes subject to the subpoena and the preparation of the index and analysis required...." He said the work "will begin forthwith."

In the past, tapes provided to Jaworski have been supplied to the House Judiciary Committee for its impeachment inquiry. It was not immediately known whether the latest subpoenaed material would ever figure in congressional consideration of impeachment.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler was asked how much time would be needed to process the tapes.

"There's really no way to say," he replied.

Ziegler, responding to questions, said possible defiance of the court was not an option Nixon and St. Clair discussed Wednesday. He suggested that defiance never had been given serious consideration in the past, either.

Ziegler also said Nixon resisted surrendering the subpoenaed material only on grounds of principle and not because he feared they might contain incriminating material.

Nixon said in his statement that he had refused to comply with Jaworski's subpoena because of "my strong desire to protect the principle of presidential confidentiality in a system of separation of powers."

But the Supreme Court said the need for the tapes and documents in the cover-up trial took precedence over any generalized claim of confidentiality.

Nixon sought to picture his legal setback in the best light, saying, "I was gratified ... to note that the court reaffirmed both the validity and the importance of the principle of executive privilege — the principle I had sought to maintain. By complying fully with the court's ruling in this case, I hope and trust that I will contribute to strengthening rather than weakening this principle for the future — so that this will prove to be not the precedent that destroyed the principle, but the action that preserved it."

Nixon said "it will be essential that the special circumstances of this case not be permitted to cloud the rights of presidents to maintain the basic confidentiality without which this office cannot function."

More than a half hour passed between issuance of the court opinion in Washington and notification to Nixon. The President got the word by telephone from White House Chief of Staff Alexander M. Haig Jr., who had seen the first bulletins on news agency teletypes at the Western White House offices. Haig checked with Washington before calling Nixon, who was in the upstairs study of his neighboring home.

While spokesmen fended off questions from reporters, Nixon and St. Clair, joined at times by Haig and Ziegler, began marathon sessions to decide on the President's response.

In midmorning a copy of the court opinion reached Nixon over an electronic telecopier system.

Ziegler said St. Clair's Washington office received 40 minutes' advance notice that the court would rule, but was not told what the decision would be.

As Nixon considered his response, he canceled a scheduled conference on housing problems with Secretary of Housing and Urban Development James T. Lynn.

Asked if the decision had caught Nixon by surprise, Ziegler replied, "I didn't detect an attitude of surprise" but rather one of disappointment.

He said the President had read advance speculation in the news media that the ruling would go against him.

After Nixon's statement accepting the verdict was prepared, Ziegler said White House officials gave advance notice of its content to Vice President Gerald R. Ford and Republican congressional leaders.

The Massachusetts House has defeated a bill that would have provided aid to the family of Air Force veteran John Ellis, who reportedly is dying of cancer. Ellis asked for state aid after the Veterans Administration turned down his claim on the basis it was not service-connected. (AP wirephoto)

Woman accused of robbing Kenosha bank, taking hostage

KENOSHA, Wis. (AP) — A 26-year-old woman accused of robbing the Pleasant Prairie Branch of the First National Bank of Kenosha and taking a hostage was being held here today awaiting an appearance before a federal commissioner.

Herbert Hoxie, special agent in charge of the Milwaukee office of the FBI, said the U.S. attorney's office has authorized prosecution and recommended $25,000 cash bond.

Hoxie also said the case may be brought before a federal grand jury which is sitting in Milwaukee.

The woman, of North Chicago, Ill., was arrested in the Waukegan area Wednesday night after a three-mile chase involving some 20 squad cars.

Authorities said the woman's car was stopped at a police roadblock. They said she tossed a shopping bag containing the money aside and struggled with three officers before being subdued.

Mrs. Helen Oechlar of Kenosha, a bank employe, was forced to accompany the woman who robbed the bank at gunpoint Wednesday. She was released after riding about two blocks in the robber's car.

Mrs. Oechlar said the woman told other bank employes she would shoot her hostage if they called police or pulled any alarms. But she quoted the woman as telling her, "I won't hurt you. I know you must have a family."

That sounds just like a movie

BY BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some melodramatic news events evoke the immediate response, "That sounds just like a movie." An American businessman's helicopter escape from a Mexican prison is one.

Now it is being filmed as "Breakout," with Tom Gries ("The Glass House," "QB VII") directing Charles Bronson as the daredevil pilot who masterminds plucking the American out of stir.

The actual figure was Victor Stadter of Glendora, Calif.

The real event happened shortly before midnight August 18, 1971, while most of the inmates of the Santa Maria Acatitia Federal Prison were watching a movie.

A helicopter swooped into the prison courtyard, collecting Joel David Kaplan, 42, serving a 28-year term for murder.

Kaplan was transferred to a light plane and flown to the United States, where he remains. In the wake of the bizarre escape came a flood of rumors and accusations, among them, that Kaplan worked for the CIA, that he had been railroaded to prison by a relative who wanted his inheritance.

"The reason the script works is the absurdity of the whole thing," says Gries. "The story would be unbelievable, except for the fact that it happened.

"We're sticking as close as possible to the story, changing only the names and certain relationships.

"The uncle, whom Kaplan accused of trying to keep him in prison, is played as a grandfather. The sister, who spent a reported million dollars to get Kaplan out of Mexico, becomes his wife."

The wife is played by Jill Ireland, Bronson's own wife. The prison escapee is Robert Duvall, the Mafia lawyer of "The Godfather."

"Breakout," which Robert Chartoff and Irwin Winkler are producing for Columbia, started filming this week in Los Angeles.

The downtown Bank of America tower is doubling for the Texas headquarters of the scheming grandfather. Then the company takes off for Spain and France to shoot the Mexico City and prison sequences.

Why not shoot in Mexico?

"Not possible," said Gries. "Working in Mexico is always difficult because of the censorship, and we ran into problems with this script.

"They don't care about the way we would portray the prison system, but they wouldn't allow us to show bribery of the judges."

The director worked in Spain before and scouted prisons in Soria and Badajoz. The government declined permission for filming there, and Gries located an abandoned prison on the French side of the Spanish border at Le Berthus.

Courtroom scenes and a guerrilla clash will be filmed in Madrid.

Gries admitted that it is difficult for movie scripts to keep up with the drama of news events like Watergate and the Patty Hearst case. Said he:

"If I had been presented the 'Breakout' script without knowing it was based on real happenings, I would have rejected it. The things that happened in this case were incredible.

"For instance, the helicopter landed and took off from the prison without a shot being fired.

"I'm changing that so the guards start to shoot, because it just might be unbelievable."

More downhome style

7- 8 — Channel 5 — The Mac Davis Show has more of its downhome style songs and comedy, with Roy Clark, Rich Little and Loretta Swit helping out the home team. Mostly, though, this is Mac's show, and he does four of his songs, besides helping out the others.

7- 7:30 — Channels 11-9 — Temperatures Rising takes a corny situation — the new surgeon (Corinne Camacho) is a woman and Dr. Mercy (Paul Lynde) falls for her — and brightens it with some pretty funny gags.

7- 10 — Channels 2-7 — There's a double-feature on the Thursday Night Movies this week. The first half is "The Family Kovack," which was a pilot that didn't sell about a close-knit Polish family. They are real and likeable people, although the movie is too long for its story. The second half is a 1969 made-in-France soap opera called "Secret World." It's about a boy who is orphaned in a car crash and then develops an adolescent crush on an American woman (Jacqueline Bisset), for which he can't be blamed for. (R)

7:30 - 8 — Channels 11-9 — The Firehouse men move from low to high class, first fighting a tenement fire and then a blaze that erupts during a fashion designer's big show. Designer Rudy Gernreich makes his acting debut in this. (R)

8- 9 — Channels 11-9 — Kung Fu's Caine (David Carradine) is caught in the middle between warring factions — railroad men and anti-railroad men — and it's a lesson in fanaticism. Hotheads on both sides want to keep on killing, but Cain preaches peace, with a little skullcracking thrown in. (R)

8- 9 — Channel 5 — Ironside looks at an inspirational college professor (Michael Parks) who inspires many things — including an attempt on his life. Ironside (Raymond Burr) battles a cold and an unknown killer, finally using a book on buried treasure help him nab his man.

9- 10 — Channels 11-9 — On The Streets of San Francisco, three kill-crazy cons escape and embark on a killing orgy. Steve's (Michael Douglas) girl friend chooses this time to have some questions about a cop's function (R)

9- 10 — Channel 5 — Jackie Cooper, Barbara Feldon and Nipsey Russell continue their search for laughter on Dean Martin's Comedyworld. Besides the usual assortment of young comics (ranging from bad to so-so) there is another film clip from an old Harold Lloyd movie.

Make hand fan from paper plate and twig

BY CAPPY DICK

At a picnic or cookout on a very warm summer day, a quickly made hand fan can be useful to stir up a welcome and relieving breeze

The completed fan, made from a clean paper plate and a straight twig, is used as shown in Figure 2

Notice how the stick goes through the plate at two places to form a secure handle. Make four slits in the paper, then press the stick through them.

This kind of fan is so easy to make that a boy or girl who is concerned about the comfort of his friends — especially the older folks at the cookout or picnic — could make one for each guest.

Very little time is required to complete a fan, once the paper plate and sticks have been assembled. SEND FOR CAPPY DICK'S HELPFUL BOOKLET.

Mothers if you need new ideas to entertain your children's scout meetings and birthday parties, you'll find 45 good ones in Cappy Dick's "Birthday Party Stunts" booklet. To get a copy, send 50 cents in coin and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to CAPPY DICK BOOKLETS, P.O Box 42877, Evergreen Park, Illinois 60642.

Dodgers' Campanis proves to be shrewdest trader

BY HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Dodgers not only have the best record in baseball, they're also tops in the trading circuit.

While the farm system continues to turn out good young ballplayers, two of the main reasons for the Dodgers' 5½-game lead in the National League's West Division are center fielder Jim Wynn and relief ace Mike Marshall.

Neither called Los Angeles home in 1973. Wynn was in his ninth full season with the Houston Astros while Marshall, who previously toiled in the majors for Detroit, Seattle and Houston, was setting a major league record by pitching in 92 games for the Montreal Expos.

That all changed in the space of 24 hours. On Dec. 5, the Dodgers acquired Marshall in exchange for Willie Davis, their long-time center fielder. The next day, they got Wynn for pitchers Claude Osteen, a veteran left-hander, and rookie Dave Culpepper.

The results should be fair warning to other general managers who deal with the Dodgers' Al Campanis to keep one hand on their wallet and the other on their roster.

Wynn is hitting a solid .290, leads the league with 21 homers and has batted in 69 runs. Meanwhile, Osteen, who won 147 games in nine years with the Dodgers, is struggling at 9-7 for the Astros.

While the Dodgers traded an everyday player in Davis, who has been in 89 games for Montreal, they acquired something of the same sort in the tireless Marshall, who already has relieved 66 times, winning 11 and saving 14. He recently set a major league mark by relieving in 13 consecutive games.

Marshall's numbers tend to cloud the fact that Davis is hitting .308 for the Expos and has driven 55 runs home.

The Associated Press also compared other major trades of last winter involving the St. Louis Cardinals and Boston Red Sox, Baltimore Orioles and Cincinnati Reds, Reds and San Diego Padres, Pittsburgh Pirates and Philadelphia Phillies, Pirates and Houston Astros and Texas Rangers and Chicago Cubs.

The Cardinals appear to have gotten the best of two separate deals with the Red Sox.

On Oct. 26, they shipped pitcher Rick Wise and outfielder Bernie Carbo to Boston for outfielder Reggie Smith and pitcher Ken Tatum. Tatum is no longer with the Cards, but Smith has been among the NL's leading hitters all season. His current average is .321 with 13 homers and 63 RBI, plus 22 doubles.

Carbo is batting .257 for Boston with 10 homers and 46 RBI while Wise has been plagued by arm trouble and has pitched in only eight games with a 3-4 record and 3.91 ERA.

The Cards struck again on Dec. 7 when they pried pitchers Lynn McGlothen, John Curtis and Mike Garman from the Red Sox for pitchers Reggie Cleveland and Diego Segui and infielder Terry Hughes.

Curtis has been a disappointment with a 4-10 record and Garman has shown flashes of promise in the bullpen, but McGlothen alone had made the deal worthwhile. He has a 12-6 mark and 2.88 ERA and has been among the NL's top winners all season.

Segui has been Boston's bullpen ace despite a 5-4 record and 4.23 ERA, but Cleveland is mired at 7-8 with a 5.12 ERA while Hughes has warmed the bench most of the time.

The best deal is supposed to be one that helps both clubs and the Pittsburgh-Philadelphia swap is a perfect example. The Pirates acquired pitcher Ken Brett, 12-6 with a 2.60 ERA, for second baseman Dave Cash, who is hitting .315 with 37 RBI from his leadoff spot and has solidified the Phillies' infield. Both players were on the NL's All-Star squad.

The No. 2 winner on the Pitts burgh staff is Jerry Reuss, 9-7, acquired from Houston for catcher Milt May, batting .288 for the Astros.

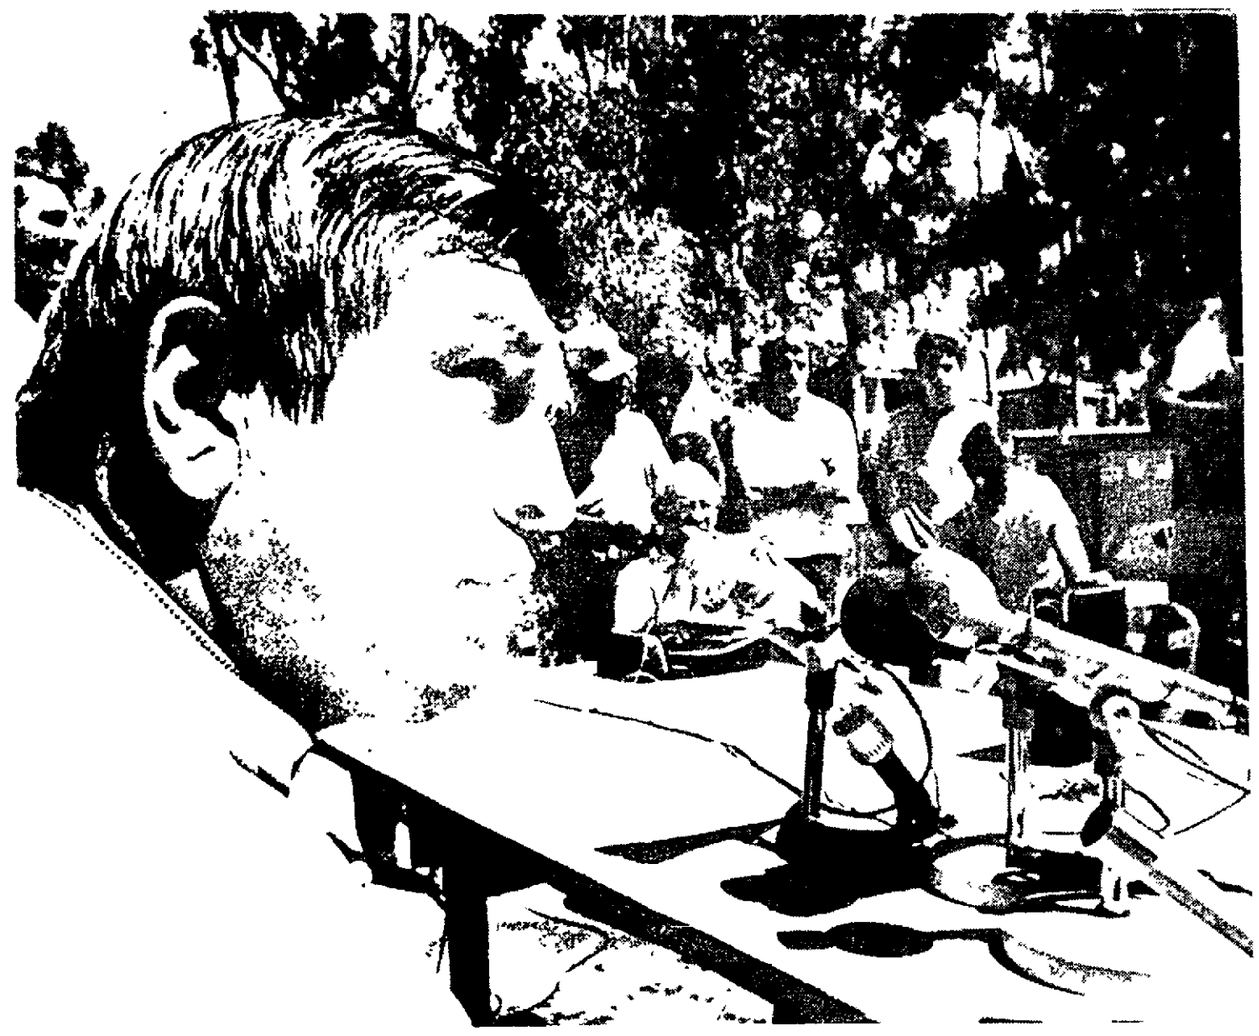
Ross Grimsley, ex-Cincinnati Baltimore's second biggest winner at 11-8. The man the Orioles surrendered, outfielder Merv Rettenmund, is batting only .225 for the Reds and is benched.

To fill Grimsley's spot in the rotation, the Reds got Clay Kirby, 7-5, from San Diego. They sent outfielder Bobby Tolan to the Padres and he was batting a solid .282 with eight homers and 42 RBI until a recent knee injury sidelined him for the rest of the campaign.

The Padres also picked up veteran slugger Willie McCovey from the Giants and he has delivered 12 homers. But they gave up pitcher Mike Caldwell who has a 9-3 record for San Francisco.

Texas landed long-time pitching ace Ferguson Jenkins from the Chicago Cubs and the lanky right-hander has a 12-9 log. The Rangers yielded two young infield prospects—Bill Madlock, a .288 hitter, and Vic Harris, who is hitting only .195 and not fielding much better.

Elsewhere, a couple of traded veterans are finding the going tough with their new clubs. Ron Santo, a .279 hitter with 337 homers in 13½ years with the Cubs, is hitting just .224 with five homers for the crosstown White Sox. And pitcher Clyde Wright, a 22-game winner in 1970 for the California Angels, is bogged down at 8-12 with the Milwaukee Brewers.



Unitas says goodbye

Johnny Unitas, who was voted Quarterback of the Half Century by the National Football League in 1969, tells a San Diego news conference that he is retiring. He will return to Baltimore, where he played for the Colts for 17 years, and says he may become a broadcaster. (AP wirephoto)

Big chance for rookies in Packer test tonight

Post Crescent news service

GREEN BAY — Many of the spectators at Lambeau Field tonight will probably find things a bit peculiar, at first, but once engrossed view the proceedings as just another football game.

Rarely, though, will a pro football contest offer such a humanistic side.

Dreams will be fulfilled and anxieties calmed. For a few of the gladiators, wearing the green and gold of the Green Bay Packers, it will be the dawn of a new career, while for many of the others it will be the beginning of the end.

To a certain extent that holds true every year on the eve of the Packers' intra-squad game. But during tonight's substitute for that annual affair, a game-like-scrimmage, largely, between Packer and Chicago Bear rookies — kickoff time is 8 p.m. — there are differences.

The rookies have been cast into prominence this season by the strike of veteran players. There will be no John Brockington or Rich McGeorge or Willie Buchanon to steal the limelight. And among the rookies there are not only the usual draft choices but an excess of unheralded free agents, whose hopes of landing a pro contract had vanished after their college careers ended, only to be revived by the strike. And unlike other seasons, they will receive more than a token appearance. Many of them have earned starting berths.

Obviously, it will be a tremendous challenge and opportunity. The mood in the Packer locker room Wednesday was evidence that the rookies realize it.

"When everybody walks through that tunnel path (onto the field) it's going to be like walking into a different world," said Charlie (Tuna) Edwards, a free agent defensive back without any college experience.

The opportunity which is beckoning is what is on most of the rookies' minds.

"For me it's a chance to prove myself. Maybe I can show I have the talent to make the squad," Larry Brumsey, a tight end from Cal-Fullerton, who earlier flunked a trial with the Southern California Sun, said.

It will be no different for the others. Except for Steve Odom and possibly one or two additional rookies, none of them is very secure.

Many of the rookies are also eager to have questions answered about themselves.

"I'm really looking forward to it," Jim Albin, a free agent defensive back from Northwest Missouri, said. "The guys are really psyched up for it. It's the first time they really played high caliber football.

"This is going to let you know what it's like later. If you handle it the first time, you know you can handle it later," he added in reference to the pressure.

Many of the rookies have a background similar to Curtis Krull, a free agent quarterback from Northwestern College of Iowa. He is from Doon, Ia., which has a population of around 400. Northwestern has an enrollment of approximately 750. And usually in college he played in front of crowds averaging 2,000 people. The most fans he ever played before was 6,000 at an NAIA playoff game.

There are some people predicting a crowd of over 50,000 people tonight if the weather is nice. No doubt many of the rookies will be awed if the stadium is full.

"It will be real weird," small town, small school punter Randy Walker said, "saw that many people in They'll have more people in dium than they do in my hom Walker hails from Boasier C and attended college at North Louisiana.

For Monte Doris it isn't the of a large crowd that excites the tradition he's being expos middle linebacker from South Doris played before more that fans in the Rose Bowl.

"I think the awesome part of ing to be — I'm wearing a Pac form," he said. "It's a differen a thrill. One of the great trac football is Packer football."

According to Odom, the play gradually been heading toward tional climax since last week. as they announced we were going to scrimmage the Bears, we had something to look forward to and it has built up every day," he said.

And despite the excitement and thrills, the players haven't lost track of their objective. Ken Payne, a colorful wide receiver from Langston, said, "We're ready for them. We're going to win."

The rookies know an impressive contribution toward a victory would enhance their chances of making the team once — and if — the strike is settled.

Gary Scutt, a free agent running back, said, "This whole Green Bay Packer thing is the greatest experience I ever had, without a doubt."

As long as the strike lasts, Scutt and most of the other rookies will continue to experience the exhilaration of being a Packer. But whether or not the thrill will continue after a settlement of the strike, might depend largely on their individual performance tonight.

Foxes in virtual tie for lead after triumph

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa — Appleton Foxes moved into a virtual tie with Waterloo for the Midwest League's Northern Division top spot after posting a 7-2 win over Cedar Rapids here Wednesday night.

Appleton now owns a record of 18-11, while Waterloo is 17-10. The Foxes trail by nine-tenths of a percentage point. Cedar Rapids entertains Appleton again tonight.

The Foxes took advantage of seven Cedar Rapids errors and 11 hits to post the win. They scored one in the third, three in the fourth, two in the fifth and one in the seventh. Appleton scored in the third as winning pitcher Dave Sandoval walked, and Clyde Jeter and Nick Medrano singled.

In the fourth, Larry Walters singled and scored after Ed Wheeler doubled. George Enright followed with a double that sent Wheeler home. Enright was pushed across after Sandoval singled.

Medrano bunted to lead off the fifth and was safe on an error. A throwing error sent him to third and Kevin Bell then produced a run-scoring single. Bell touched home after Enright socked a single.

An error Wheeler's single and an infield out led to Appleton's final run in the seventh.

Sandoval worked the first five innings to pick up the win. He is record is now 8-2. Phil Mullen, who held the Astros hitless during the final four innings, was credited with the save.

Wheeler finished with three hits in as many plate appearances, while Enright and Jeter collected two hits apiece.

Veteran drivers at Road America

ELKHART LAKE, Wis. (AP) — The open-wheel Formula 5,000 road racing series visits Road America Sunday with only five points separating Brian Redman, the season point leader, and Mario Andretti and David Hobbs, tied for second.

The Formula 5,000 event will cap the season's second weekend of racing at the twisting, four-mile course. A Trans-Am sedan race Saturday, carrying a $25,000 purse, has attracted 40 entrants, while 34 have signed up for the $50,000 Sunday event.

Redman, an Englishman and defending Formula 5,000 champion; Hobbs, also of England, and Andretti, Nazareth, Pa., have one victory apiece in the three Formula races to date this year. Redman, who also has finished second and 14th, tops the standings with 35 points.

Andretti, with fourth and 13th place finishes besides his victory, is tied with Hobbs at 30 points. Sunday's race will be the fourth of seven in the 1974 series.

Redman, who won here last year to start a run of six successive Formula victories, has finished lower than second in only one of his last 10 races. Still, he considers Andretti the man to beat.

"He is a formidable competitor," Redman said. "If he keeps going, if his car doesn't fail him, he's the man you have to always worry about. If he were not in the series, I'd breathe a lot easier."

Andretti, who won his first major event in three years at Watkins Glen, N.Y., earlier this month, has entered a Lola-Chevrolet, as have Redman and Hobbs.

Other entrants include Sam Posey, Eppie Wietzes and former champion Graham McRae in Lola-Chevs, and Brett Lunger and Elliott Forbes-Robinson in Eagle-Chevs. Lunger and Wietzes are tied for fourth in the series with 27 points each.

The Formula 5,000 series this year is jointly sanctioned by the Sports Car Club of America (SSCA) and the U. S. Auto Club (USAC). Besides Andretti, Hobbs and Posey, top USAC drivers entered here include Mike Mosley (Lola-Chev), John Martin (McLaren turbo-Offy), Dick Simon (Eagle Fen-lube) and Dan Murphy (Cicada-Drake).

The Formula 5,000 will consist of two 60 mile qualifying heats, the first starting at 12:30 p.m., and a 100 mile feature. Saturday's 200 mile Trans-Am is slated for 2 p.m. Practice and qualifying are scheduled Friday.

Cubs tab Marshall after Lockman quits

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Marshall, a journeyman major league player who became a successful minor league pilot, is the new manager of the Chicago Cubs.

Marshall, 42, Cub third base coach, Wednesday was named to replace Whitey Lockman, who kicked himself upstairs for full-time duty as vice president in charge of player development.

The somewhat surprising move was strictly the idea of Lockman, apparently unhappy in the role of field boss since he was tapped as successor to dismissed Leo Durocher on July 24, 1972.

Marshall, the American Association's manager of the year with the Cubs' Wichita farm club in 1972, thus steps in as boss in the midst of a Cub rebuilding year.

After the Cubs' fifth place 1973 finish in the National League East race, angered owner Phil Wrigley ordered a house cleaning that sent packing such old guard retainers as pitcher Fergy Jenkins, third baseman Ron Santo, second baseman Glenn Beckert and catcher Randy Hundley.

In his second full Cub season, Lockman had directed the Cubs to a current 41-52 record, seven games off the NL East pace at the All-Star game break.

Lockman said Marshall was brought up from Wichita to start this season as Cub third base coach at his recommendation as "the manager of the future for the Cubs."

"I had seriously thought of quitting as manager for several weeks and I made up my mind Wednesday morning when I told Mr. Wrigley and (Executive Vice President) John Holland," said Lockman.

"They concurred with my recommendation of Marshall, who now has had a half season to get acquainted with the personnel and can do a fine job of managing. He will be his own man as manager."

The name of Ernie Banks, a Cub playing hero for 19 seasons and now a roving instructor, was not considered by Cub brass to become the first black major league manager.

Vice President Holland said: "As far as I know, Ernie doesn't care about being a manager. He's doing right now exactly what he wants in working with young players in our entire system."

Now that the All-Star Game is history, all the stars can get back to the business of settling the four division races in the remaining 10 weeks of the baseball season.

NFL strike threc ıtens Hall of Fame cc ıntest

BY BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Johnny Unitas is headed for the Pro Football Hall of Fame—but there's a growing chance the St. Louis Cardinals and Buffalo Bills may not see the Canton, Ohio, shrine this year.

The National Football League players' strike, which earlier this month kayoed Friday night's College All-Star Game, is going after Saturday's nationally televised Hall of Fame Game between the Cards and Bills—the kickoff of the preseason schedule—as its next target.

And the players picked up a few key blocks Wednesday when spokesmen for the United Auto Workers Union said they would join players picketing the game.

The 26 club owners have acknowledged that this year's game—and all contests during the Aug. 2-5 first week of exhibitions—may not be all they could be.

They've admitted that, because of the 25-day-old strike, they'll be using mostly rookies and free agents and only a smattering of stars and other veterans and, thus, have instituted a league-wide policy of ticket refunds for those games.

Contract talks between the NFL Players Association and the owners' NFL Management Council, which have taken more turns than a broken-field runner, collapsed completely Monday. There have been no meetings since then and none are expected at least through the weekend.

Unitas, acclaimed as one of the greatest quarterbacks in the history of pro football, retired Wednesday after 18 years in the NFL. The strike had nothing to do with i t, though. Two weeks go, Unitas wa s the lone San Diego v eteran to cross the players' picket lin e and enter the Chargers' camp for worl touts.

Unita s, who passed for more touchdowns ; nd more yards than any other player in the league, explained: "I didn't fe el my legs were capable of taking the punishment they would have had to take ... I hate to quit playing football. The mind is willing but your body we ars out."

The 4: -year-old All-Pro, who left the Baltimo re Colts for San Diego a year ago, sai he would retu rn to Maryland although his $500,000 contract for two years wi ll be honored by the Chargers.

On the 50th anniversary of the NFL, Unitas v vas named Player of the Decade by The Associated Press. Among his myri ad records are his 40,239 passing yard s, 290 touchdowns, 47 consecutive gam es with touchdown passes and 27 game: s with 300 or more yards passing.

The m ajor roadblocks in the strike are the s o-called "freedom issues," the players' demands for the elimination of the reser ve and option clauses and the Rozelle c ompensation rule.

Neithe r St. Louis nor Buffalo are ready tc throw in the towel, yet, though.

Cards Coach Don Coryell named rookie q uarterback Bill Bynum of Western New Mexico to direct the attack agai nst the Bills.

The Bi lls, meanwhile, are keeping their plar s secret, including the travel arrangem ents to the game. A team spokesma n said the club is attempting to minin ize demonstrations which might occ ur because of the strike.

McBride ends Smith's streak

SEYMOUR — M.J. McBride of Shawano, collected a $105 bounty by beating out Appleton's J.J. Smith to take first place in the 20-lap feature event at Paul's Speedway here Wednesday night.

Smith was the winner of five feature races here so far this season. He spun out early in the final race but managed to return and finish in third place. Roger Paul of New London took second.

McEride qualified for the pole position by setting a new time trial record of The previous record of was established in 1972 by Medina's Jerry Smith.

All of the heat races were decided on the final lap. Kimberly's Roger Regeth was the winner of the trophy dash. The first three finishers in the initial heat were; Mike Blazer Jerry Jonet, and Jerry Charlier, of Green Bay.

Rick Peters of Gree ay captured the second heat, fol by Terry Anvikenk, Navarino, an Shawano's Leroy Raddant.

Denny Teschke of Bonduel took the third heat. Neenah's Marcus Brie was second and Dave Valentyne, Kimberly, third.

Regeth edged out Paul for the fourth heat prize. J.J. Smith was third and McBride ended up fourth.

Raddant won the semi-feature. Rick Peters was second and Brei third.

Sports over-emphasized says Byrd

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said today that sports in the United States are over-emphasized and suggested that athletics be given no higher priority than he believes they deserve.

"It is time athletics were viewed in a more proper perspective," said Byrd, Senate Democratic leader. "It is time we all realized that few things are less vital to our national survival than a fall without NFL football, the outcome of a single baseball game or the location where high school athletes choose to continue their athletic training."

He made his remarks in a speech prepared for the Senate floor.

Byrd said he enjoyed watching skilled athletes compete but he is concerned when sports are given great importance, in many cases at the expense of education.

The Senate Democrat criticized the high salaries paid professional athletes, and the owners who pay them, but most of his attack centered on the huge sums of money spent on college athletics and the building of stadiums and arenas.

"At one time, colleges and universities justified enormous expenditures for athletics by saying the revenue produced by the school's teams helped build classrooms and laboratories," he said.

Byrd said that even schools with top-flight athletic programs while preserving their status as great universities will have to downgrade one or the other in the next few years.

"Either the athletic department is going to have to settle for a smaller, albeit equitable, share of the budgetary pie, or the university itself is going to suffer," he said. "Unless we start now to view sports in better prespective —to give athletics a priority no higher than they deserve —that choice might be more difficult than it should be."

Byrd said the simple answer is de-emphasis but that past experience shows that won't work. Thus, he said, the solution may be found in taking the other direction.

"The over-emphasis has come step by step, bit by bit, and will continue until it reaches some undetermined point in the future," he said. "It might prove the wiser course, then, for the NCAA to remove all sanctions on recruiting, scholarships and 'expense money' and require only that schools make public the total costs of their athletic programs—even the expenses now hidden because they go for unethical and improper activities.

"The result would be that one, two, or, at the most, a half-dozen universities would have powerhouses, with which the rest of the schools would be unable to compete. Those latter institutions, therefore, would be relieved of a great deal of pressure and could rededicate themselves to higher education, and to developing athletic programs truly amateur, involving a greater percentage of their students.

"The games themselves— even the so-called major sports of baseball, basketball, and football—would remain unchanged, and would serve the recreational purpose they were originally intended to serve," said Byrd.

New Holstein posts 8-5 win

WEST BEND, Wis. (AP) — Keith Seifert, who had homered in the fourth inning, singled and scored the winning run in a four run seventh Wednesday night, leading New Holstein over Mineral Point 8-5 and into the finals of the Wisconsin public high school summer baseball meet.

New Holstein (12-6) was to play for the championship today against Homestead (27-2). Homestead beat Hurley 4-2 in the other semifinals Wednesday night as catcher Larry Dahl scored one run and drove in another.

New Holstein trailed 5-4 when Bruce Bink started the decisive seventh inning rally with a double. After a sacrifice, Seifert singled home the tying run.

A stolen base by Seifert, an intentional walk and a single by Dave Buechel produced the winning run. Two more runs scored in the inning on a wild pitch and a sacrifice fly by Tom Ebertz.

Homestead broke a 2-2 tie in the fourth inning when Rick Dembreck walked, stole second, moved to third on an error and scored on a single by Dahl. A single, a walk and two sacrifices produced an insurance run an inning later.

Bruce Bahlman allowed Hurley only three hits and struck out nine, but was touched for two runs in the second on three walks, a sacrifice fly and a single.

Homestead tied the score against Bob Rossi, first of three Hurley pitchers, in the third. A walk, a double by Dahl and a fielder's choice produced one run and Randy Rennicke singled home Dahl for the other.

'Young ones' coming on strong in golf world

PORT CREDIT, Ont. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Tom Weiskopf and Australian Bruce Crampton ranked as the men to beat in the $200,000 Canadian Open Golf Tournament that began today.

They enjoyed that role, however, off last year's performances—not this year's.

At this time last year—not for the season but at this tournament—that quartet had won 14 tournaments. Weiskopf, Nicklaus and Crampton had won four each, Trevino two.

This year, they have a combined victory total of two. Nicklaus has won one. Trevino has won one.

"I'm tired. I'm getting burned out," Trevino says.

"Fate has been different to me this year," Crampton says.

"I've had my ups and downs before," say nicklaus. "It's happened in other years. It's happening this year."

Weiskopf doesn't like to talk about it, but a bad wrist has bothered him all season.

And there's another factor that contributes to their lack of success. The young guys.

The big four all are over 30. Weiskopf is just over the mark. Nicklaus and Trevino are 34. Crampton is 38.

Johnny Miller has won five times this year. Hubert Green has won three times and been second once.

Jerry Heard went through one stretch where he finished first, second, then third in consecutive tournaments. He lost in a playoff in another one.

Tom Watson won the Western Open. He came close to winning the U.S. Open and three others.

John Mahaffey has been second in three tournaments, third in another. Eddie Pierce has been second in two. Ben Crenshaw has been second in two. Forrest Fezler was second in the U.S. Open, lost in a playoff the next week and, in the last 18 months, has been in position to win eight times.

"I have never seen anything like this," said veteran tournament director John Montgomery. "The young ones are coming on so strong."

The young ones are coming on and the stars of just a year ago are wondering what happened.

Mike Yarnell hits 623 series

Mike Yarnell ripped a 623 series in the junior boys division of the Bar-B-Q Parent-Junior Mixed League at the Super Bowl recently.

Other junior scores included; Ken Kramer 599, Duke Rusch 231-550 and Sue Grall 462.

In the men's category, Bob Moberg socked a 596. Other top scores were; Don Brandenburg 590, Dennis Kroes 588, Jerry Reider 225-586, and Roger Reschke, a 234 game.

Muggs Selig topped the women with a 571. JoAnn Goettel ripped a 222-541 and Marlene Smudde counted a 204 singleton.

Strike won't ruii n NFL —Rosenbloom

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Rams' owner Carroll Rosenbloom said Wednesday he didn't think the National Football League strike "will ruin the entire NFL season, but how long is it going to take the veterans to get back into shape once the strike is over?"

Rosenbl oom also urged players to return to ca mp—to preserve the unity of the teams — adding: "No matter what happens, I think the NFL is going to present t he best brand of football around."

He said he liked almost every player in the NF L personally and he said he doesn't bla ame the players for the strike as much a s he does Ed Garvey, executive direct or of the NFL Players Association.

"What u osets me," he said, "is that a number c of publications have gone out on a limb and said we're the favorites to get into and win the Super Bowl. Then some guy steps in and makes all this trouble ."

"I think most of the players are 99.44 per cent gre eat guys. There are very few bad guys in the league. There are a lot of owners I don't like, but Garvey has never found one thing that's right in the NFL."

Rosenbloom defended the socalled Rozelle rule , the option year and the reserve clausе, three major issues which the players association wants modified.

"As for t he reserve clause, you have to have it or else I'd buy up all the best players. The few of us who could afford it would b uy all the good players," Rosenbloom said.

The Rozel le rule is the same type of safeguard, he said, referring to the NFL policy that says if a player plays out his optic on and joins another team, the player's new team must compensate the old t eam.

Rosenbloo n said: "You must have compensatio n or two teams would get so strong the re wouldn't be any competition."

Rosenbloo n said he didn't expect the strike to last for more than a few more weeks.

His remarks came a luncheon attended by Southern California tailback Anthony Davis. Rosenbloom joked: "Are you ready to become a Ram? I just want to say that if Mr. Davis goes anywhere else I'm gonna get on him."

Davis laughed and said he still hadn't made a decision about whether to play pro football or pro baseball. He has been drafted by the Baltimore Orioles and reportedly turned down a lucrative baseball contract.

Williams cited at golf dinner

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Andy Williams was named today as the winner of the "Man of the Year" Entertainment Award to be presented Aug. 20 at the 10th All-American Collegiate Golf Dinner here.

Williams was cited for his contributions to golf and charities. He has hosted the Andy Williams San Diego Open tournament since 1968.

Among the previous winners of the Entertainment Award are Bob Hope, Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Johnny Carson, Joey Bishop, Dick Martin and Vic Damone.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals said Wednesday their Aug. 18 National Football League exhibition game against the San Diego Chargers has been moved from Memphis, Tenn., to Seattle.

Memphis sponsors requested last month that the game be transferred. It will be played, the Cardinals said, in the University of Washington's Husky Stadium.

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Broncos of the National Football League announced the signing Wednesday of two free agents, Rocky Martin, 6-foot, 220-pound linebacker from Colorado, and Dana Coleman, a 6-3, 250-pound guard from LaVerne College.

HONOLULU (AP) — Danny Rogers, general manager of the Hawaiians of the World Football League, announced Wednesday that he is leaving the team to become a league vice president.

Rogers will be in charge of international expansion, focusing on league plans to add a franchise in Japan, Donald J. Regan, WFL general counsel, said at a news conference.

Chris Hemmeter, a part-owner of the local franchise, said a new general manager has not been hired.

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Lobsters of the World Team Tennis league have added Linda Tuero of the United States and Helga Masthoff of West Germany to their draft list.

Ms. Tuero ranked eighth in the United States in 1972, was the first round draft choice of the Minnesota Buckskins and had signed to play in the WTT before her temporary retirement.

Record crowd at WFL tilt

BY BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Jacksonville can't kick ... not enough, anyway.

And Gary Davidson certainly can't. Not after the World Football League commissioner saw his "action and entertainment" dream explode into reality in football-mad Birmingham.

The Sharks set a WFL record Wednesday night—not a hard feat considering the league's only a few weeks old—when they kicked four field goals in the first half of their game against Southern California.

Grant Guthrie booted three-pointers of 23, 29, 27 and 42 yards. It turned out to be three points too few—or perhaps the game turned out to be seven seconds too long for Jacksonville.

On the last play of the game, rookie quarterback Tony Adams from Utah State heaved a 40-yard touchdown pass to Dave Williams and the Sun came up shining with a 22-19 victory that shocked the 46,780 Sharks fans.

In Wednesday night's other WFL games, the Birmingham Americans clobbered Memphis 58-33, the Chicago Fire turned back Portland 29-22 and the Florida Blazers beat Houston 15-3. The New York Stars are in Philadelphia tonight for the WFL's nationally televised game against the Bell.

Americans 58, Southmen 33

As a WFL-record 61,319 fans at Legion Field shrieked their approval, veteran George Mira and rookie Matthew Reed of Grambling decimated Memphis' secondary with 378 aerial yards and five touchdown passes—three to Alfred Jenkins—to keep the Americans unbeaten.

Mira threw 38 and 74-yard scoring strikes to Jenkins and one to Dennis Homan for 12 yards. In the third period, Mira bowed out with a sprained ankle.

Fire 29, Storm 22

Virgil Carter of the Fire had a hot night in the air, too. He threw touchdown passes of 50 yards to Mark Keller, one yard to Cyril Pinder and 69 yards to James Scott to as Chicago took advantage of Storm mistakes to stay tied with Birmingham atop the Central Division.

"Damn, 22 points should be enough to win in football," fumed Portland Coach Dick Coury. "We gave up some cheap touchdowns. Anytime you make the mistakes we did and give up the big touchdowns, you can't win."

Blazers 15, Texans 3

Rookie running back Tommy Reamon rambled for 73 yards, 15 of them good for a touchdown, and caught an actionpoint pass in the Blazers' easy victory over the Texans, whose only points came on a 47-yard Charlie Durkee field goal.

Major league attendance shows gain

BY KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Winning isn't everything—but it sure helps attendance.

The Los Angeles Dodgers have been living by baseball's "golden rule" for some time and now the San Diego Padres, Texas Rangers and Cleveland Indians are finding it to be true.

Attendance in the major leagues is up over last year by 150,000 with the dramatic help of those teams, who are winning more games this season and concurrently more fans.

The Padres have made the most dramatic attendance leap, according to an Associated Press survey. By the All-Star break, the Padres had drawn 763,930 fans, compared with 434,468 last season.

Last year, the Padres had a 33-65 won-lost record in the National League West. This year, although still last, they have improved to 43-58.

The Rangers also have helped push major league attendance to 17,701,547 by midseason. Last year at this point, the total attendance figure was 17,551,406.

Involved in a pennant race for the first time, the Rangers have drawn 775,120 into their stadium so far.

Promotional gimmicks have helped the Indians, but the fact that they are in the American League East race is the main reason for better attendance there, club officials feel.

In 1973, the Indians were out of contention in last place and drew only 400,907 by All-Star time. This year, they're fighting for the East Division lead and have produced 657,046 fans so far—more than Cleveland drew 7ll of last season (605,073).

At the end of the season's first half, the National League West leaders, the Dodgers, had pulled a stunning total of 1,539,004 fans into Dodger Stadium. That's 405,110 more than last season and by far the best figure in the majors.

This year's figures show the National League in front, 9,956,004 to 7,745,543. (Last year at this time, the Nationals led, 9,520,980 to 8,030,426).

Attendance has skyrocketed also in Cincinnati, St. Louis and Piladelphia as well. Each has gone over the one million mark—something no American League team has accomplished.

The Reds have drawn 1,190,755 so far, up from 957,604 last year; the Cardinals are at 1,029,767, compared to last year's 895,029 and 1,000,778 have attended Phillies' games this season, a climb from last year's — 856,312.

All three teams are involved in pennant fights.

The Atlanta Braves, who have drawn 659,746 fans this year, are the other NL team on the plus side. Their attendance, up 181,35 from last year, has been aided by Hank Aaron.

While the National League has six teams which are drawing more than last year, the American League can only boast three. The Baltimore Orioles, up to 555,816 from 508,227 last year, join Cleveland andTexas in that category.

The Boston Red Sox, leaders in the American League East, also lead the American League in attendance despite having the smallest park (seating capacity 33,379). The Red Sox have drawn 803,446 thus far, down fgm last yar's 886,481.

The Houston Astros took the biggest drop in attendance, from 993,376 to 721,174.

Bob, Mary & Mike's win, Hide-A-Way nips Military

KAUKAUNA — Mike Allgeyer tossed a three-hit shutout as Bob, Mary & Mike's of Kaukauna, blanked Dave's Pub, Denmark, 1-0, in Fox Valley Classic Softball League action here Wednesday night.

In the other game, Hide-A-Way of Appleton, edged past Dickinson Moto-Ski, 3-2.

Tonight at Sunset Park in Kimberly, Jack's Rose Hill (7-2) of Little Chute, goes against The Bar of Green Bay (8-1) in a makeup game beginning at 7:15.

If Rose Hill wins that contest, the two teams will be tied for first place. Then, a playoff game for the title will immediately follow. If the Bar takes the makeup contest, however, it will be the undisputed champ.

Both Allgeyer and Bob Stelzer of Dave's Pub, fired three-hitters. Bob, Mary & Mike's scored the winning run in the fourth inning on Jeff School's infield hit.

Terry Haack pounded out two hits in Hide-A-Way's triumph. Two errors, a passed ball and Haack's single provided Hide-A-Way with the deciding run. Glenn Nau was the winning hurler, while Ron Wardecki took the setback.

Unitas calls it quits

BY NICK ALLEN
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "I hate to quit playing football," said Johnny Unitas. "I'd like to play for another 30 years. Your mind is willing but your body wears out."

With those words Unitas, the quarterback who completed more passes and gained more yards through the air than anyone else in pro football history, announced his retirement Wednesday.

Unitas pulled out of the sport at the age of 41 as he was going into his 19th season.

Playing another season, he told newsmen, would be "too much to ask of a pair of 98-year-old legs" suffering from arthritis.

"I'm taking up time on the field when it could be used for better purposes for the younger people," said Unitas, who was starting his second year with the San Diego Chargers since he left the Baltimore Colts.

The National Football League star said he offered to stay and coach, but Coach Tommy Prothro declined.

The Chargers picked up Unitas a year ago when the Colts benched him as a starter after 17 years. San Diego paid $150,000 for the rights to negotiate with him, then signed him to a two-year contract reportedly paying $500,000.

Unitas said Chargers owner Eugene Klein "said my contract will be honored." Klein issued a statement that made no mention of the contract but praised Unitas as "the best quarterback in the history of the game."

"I tried to workout four or five times but my knees swelled up and popped and were sore," he said. "It would be foolish for me to try to do things I once tried to do."

For the things he used to do, the NFL, on its 50th anniversary in 1969, named the ex-University of Louisville player its greatest quarterback ever.

The records set by Unitas which still stand include the most passes attempted by a pro quarterback, 5,186; the most completed, 2,830; the most yards gained passing, 40,239, and the most touchdowns through the air, 290.

When the Chargers opened their training camp here this year, Unitas was the only veteran to cross the picket line of the NFL Players Association. Charger veterans picketed outside the camp as Unitas announced his retirement inside.

Colts trade Tom Mitchell

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Tom Mitchell, a starting tight end for the Baltimore Colts for the past two National Football League seasons, is coming to the San Francisco 49ers in lieu of two future draft choices the Colts owed San Francisco.

The trade, announced Wednesday, gives the 49ers a surplus of good tight ends. However, veterans Ted Kwalick and Dick Witcher are signed to move to the World Football League in 1975.

Coach Dick Nolan said he plans to keep rookie tight end Keith Fahnhorst, No. 2 draft choice from Minnesota, and the 49ers have two free agent tight ends, John Curtis and Mike Dettling.

Mitchell, 30, was Bucknell's all-time leading receiver and began his pro football career in 1966 with the Oakland Raiders, moving to the Colts in 1967. The 6-foot-3, 215-pounder had his best season in 1972 when he caught 40 passes for 494 yards.

Baltimore General Manager Joe Thomas said Mitchell had asked to be traded last year, or the Colts would not have let him go.

Meanwhile, running back Vic Washington reported to camp Wednesday, the first 49er veteran to show up.

"It takes time to mentally and physically prepare for a football season, and I need that time," said Washington, who has been bothered with ankle injuries the last two seasons.

"I would have come sooner," he said, "but I thought maybe the players and owners would reach an agreement by now. And they eventually will, because there is too much money involved in this thing. But I couldn't wait for that to happen."

There has been no picketing at the 49ers' camp since last Friday. The striking players were talking Wednesday about setting up their own practice sessions.

In preparation for the exhibition opener Aug. 3 in San Diego, the 49ers added three free agents Wednesday—linebacker and center Craig Fair of Oregon State and defensive linemen Bruce Paisley, who played in Canada, and Skip Kubelius of Alabama.

Marion loses in regional action

MARION — Marion was saddled with a 11-0 defeat by Oconto Falls in the first of three games between the two teams in the American Legion regional playoff here Wednesday night.

With the win, Oconto Falls took a 1-0 advantage as action moves to Marinette for game two.

The winning pitcher was Doug Meyer, a left-hander, who walked five while striking out 10. Tim Dieck, the first of three Marion hurlers, went 3 innings in taking the loss.

Lee Peterson led Oconto Falls with three hits, including a double, while Rick Reim belted two hits. For Marion, Rusty Scheider slammed two of Marion's three hits in a two-for-three performance.

Stabler crosses Raiders 'line'

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Raiders now have six veterans in training camp, including quarterback Ken Stabler, but 42 squad players are still out in the National Football League strike and 19 of them have started their own training camp.

Stabler, running back Pete Banaszak and defensive tackle Tony Cline reported into camp Wednesday afternoon.

Punter Bateman crosses Cowboy's picket line

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboy punter Marv Bateman became the team's 10th veteran to report to training camp here Wednesday.

Bateman had said earlier he would report as soon as his wife had their first child. It was a baby girl.

The Cowboys' afternoon workout was observed by pickets Mel Renfro of the Cowboys and former Cowboy Otto Brown.

Bruce Hansen ties for lead in State Amateur

MANITOWOC, Wis. (AP) — What for 36 holes had been the Archie Dadian Open became a logjam Wednesday, with two strokes separating the top three players going into today's final round of the 74th Wisconsin Golf Association amateur meet.

Bruce Hansen picked up three strokes in Wednesday's third round to tie Dadian, South Milwaukee, for the lead, while Mark Bemowski charged to within two strokes with a sizzling 68.

Dadian, sole leader the first two rounds, slipped to a two over par 73 Wednesday for a 54 hole total of 212, one under par for the meet at Branch River Country Club.

Hansen, representing Racine Meadowbrook, took a one stroke lead on the 16th hole, but slipped back into a tie with a bogey, only his second of the day, on the 18th. Hansen fired a 70 for the round.

Bemowski, Milwaukee, who had trailed Dadian by seven strokes at the start of the day, recorded four birdies and two bogeys for his 68 and 214 total. Warren Dailey of Madison matched Bemowski's 68, low score of the tournament, to surge to fourth place at 217.

Bemowski said he could have shot a 64, but missed several close putts and failed to sink a birdie putt of less than 10 feet.

Dadian bogeyed Nos. 8 and 9 for a one over front nine total. Hansen tied him at two under for the tournament with a birdie on No. 13, then took the lead on the 501 yard 14th with a birdie four. Both putts were of less than three feet.

Hansen slipped back to a tie with a bogey on 15, then regained the lead on 17 when Dadian bogeyed. Dadian missed the green on the par 3 hole, chipped on and two-putted.

Hansen played the 18th cautiously and paid for it, hitting his second shot short of the green, chipping on and two putting for a five.

"I don't play to make birds, but I get very few bogeys," Hansen said. "I'm unspectacular. I just try to make pars. I try to knock it up a foot from the hole and hit for a bird or a par."

Dailey was five under for his round until he took a double bogey six on the 18th hole. Dailey, who spent three hours on the putting green Tuesday and two more Wednesday, is four over for the tournament but six over on the 18th hole alone.

Dadian, 1963 champion and runnerup in 1967, predicted conservative play be the co-leaders in the final round.

"I think we're going to play for Mr. Par tomorrow," he said.

Police & fire beat

LITTLE CHUTE — Thomas G. Van Asten, 17, route 1, Greenleaf, was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital in Appleton for treatment of a sprained ankle after his motorcycle slid off the pavement and entered a ditch on County Trunk N and the entrance ramp to U.S. 41 about 11:30 a.m. Tuesday. Police said he had been attempting to turn from N onto the ramp.

A short in the wiring was listed as the possible cause of a fire which broke out in a diaper machine at the R. Sabee Co., 1850 W. Highland Ave., about 12:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Smoke and water damage resulted after the fire spread through lint and rolls of pulp. Workers returning from lunch discovered the fire and had it out before firemen arrived.

Douglas K. Martin, 232 W. Foster St., reported the theft of a $340 set of golf clubs from his car in the 800 block of W. College Avenue about 2 a.m. Wednesday.

No determination of losses was made after a break-in to a cigarette vending machine late Tuesday at the Appleton Post Office, 129 N. Superior St.

Police said the empty coin box and a screwdriver apparently used to pry open the machine were found later in the lobby.

No damage estimate was given after vandalism early Tuesday at Reid Municipal Golf Course.

Police said someone drove a vehicle onto the 18th green and spun the wheels at one point, digging up a two-foot area of sod.

Damage was estimated at $240 after holes were shot in a window and door Monday or Tuesday at the Holiday House, 116 N. Locust St.

Rick Hall, 1223 N. State St., told police someone forced the door of his car open, bending the hinges and denting the right front quarter panel early Wednesday while the vehicle was parked in the 100 block of N. State Street. No damage estimate was given.

Mark Neuschafer, route 2, Fremont, told police someone scratched the entire length of one side of his car while it was parked Tuesday morning in the 100 block of W. Washington Street. He gave no damage estimate.

Police are investigating an apparent robbery and assault complaint from the 500 block of N. Appleton Street late Tuesday. They gave these details:

Jeffrey J. Friebel, 326 W. Winnebago St., said he was walking north on Appleton when he observed two persons quarreling. An older male, apparently in his 20s, struck a younger male, about 17, in the face and made him take out his wallet. He took out some of the money and started to walk away.

When he saw Friebel, the older male started to run away, but Friebel caught up with him at Clark Street.

There, the robbery suspect struck Friebel three times in the face before running away. Friebel could not provide a description of the man to police, who received no complaint from the alleged robbery victim.

Henry Van Stippen, 1927 S. Jefferson St., reported the theft of several articles of fishing equipment, including poles, rods and reels, plus a battery charger and a portable radio from a boat on his property between July 16 and 20. The items were valued together at $278.

KAUKAUNA — Bernard P. Przybylski, 18, 426 W. Seventh St., was taken to Kaukauna Community Hospital for treatment of a fractured shoulder after his car skidded off County Trunk GG and broke off a power pole in a ditch. The accident took place east of the city about 10:45 p.m. Saturday.

FREEDOM — Four persons were taken to Green Bay St. Mary Hospital for treatment of injuries after a single-car crash on State 55 at County Trunk E about 3:15 p.m. Wednesday.

The driver, Gerald C. Wagner, 22, was treated for head cuts, while one passenger, Robert Christianson, 52, sustained a forehead cut. Ken De Rayter, 33, complained of knee pains, and Don Melotte, 43, received knee and shoulder injuries. All four are from rural Seymour.

Police said Wagner was driving north on 55 when a pickup truck pulled into his path from E. Wagner applied his brakes, skidded through the intersection and off the pavement, where his vehicle struck a power pole and highway sign.

Richard A. Stack, 1621 S. Hillcrest Drive, told police someone took a fishing rod and reel and two pairs of skis with bindings from his garage since last Saturday. He valued the items at $480.

A 15-year-old Appleton boy told police an unidentified man aimed a gun at him while he and two other boys were riding their bicycles on a path below Riverside Cemetery about 12:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The boy said the man pointed the weapon at them for no apparent reason as they approached. He fired no shots. The boys rode from the area.

The man was described as about 20 and had a girl with him. Police searched the area but could not locate the suspect.

About 10 used radiators valued at $250 were reported stolen Tuesday or Wednesday from Butch's Auto Body, 1337 E. Northland Ave. Police said auto body tools valued at more than $200 also have been missing from the shop since July 8.

Norman W. Stoeger, 59, 513 E. Fremont St., was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital for treatment of arm injuries after his car was backed into by another auto in front of Stoeger's home about 6:20 p.m. Wednesday. Stoeger had been backing out of his driveway, while the other car, driven by Rick W. Mathias, 18, 510 Pleasant St., Oshkosh, was backing out from a driveway across the street, police said.

Debra A. Henschel, 19, 1115½ N. Richmond St., was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital after she sustained a back injury and neck sprain in a two-car accident at Locust Street and Parkway Boulevard about 9 p.m. Wednesday.

She was riding in a car driven by Ernest E. Henschel, 24, same address, which was moving south on Locust when the second auto, driven by Steven J. Hamilton, 22, 1007 W. Frances St., slid into its side from the westbound lane of Parkway.

KAUKAUNA — Assorted tools, a power grinder and an acetylene torch cutting set with a large amount of hose were reported stolen from a construction site in the new industrial park.

The items, valued at several hundred dollars and reported missing by an employe of August Winter and Sons, Inc., Appleton, were taken between 5:30 p.m. Monday and 7:30 a.m. Tuesday. A lock was cut from a large tool box to get at some of the missing items.

Courts

The case of an 18-year-old Appleton man, accused of discharging a weapon into an occupied building, was bound over to Circuit Court for trial after a preliminary hearing Tuesday before Judge R. Thomas Cane in Outagamie County Court Branch 3.

Kent A. Kampo, 1338 W. Prospect Ave., is accused of firing two shots into the home of Thomas Drootsan, 315 N. Outagamie St., early June 10. Drootsan is a former county narcotics squad officer.

The shots, from a .38 caliber pistol, broke a window and an air conditioner, but neither Drootsan or any members of his family were injured.

A 17-year-old youth also faces charges in relation to the incident. His case recently was waived from juvenile court to adult criminal court.

Fall off bicycle causes critical head lacerations

COMBINED LOCKS — Mrs. Robert Stuyvenberg, 43, 197 S. James St., Kimberly, was listed in critical condition at St. Elizabeth Hospital this morning after suffering severe head lacerations in a fall from her bicycle about 6:55 p.m. Wednesday.

According to police, Mrs. Stuyvenberg was eastbound on a hill in the 300 block of Prospect Street when she glanced over her shoulder as a car approached from the rear. In doing so, she lost control of the bicycle and was thrown to the roadway.

A witness told police there was no contact between the bike and the auto. She was taken to St. Elizabeth by ambulance and underwent surgery.

There will also be movies, bingo, an auction, a rummage sale and concession stands. A beef dinner will be served, beginning at the opening time.

St. Aloysius Church plans auction, picnic

KAUKAUNA — St. Aloysius Catholic Church has scheduled an auction in conjunction with its annual picnic Aug. 10 and 11.

The auction will begin at 5:30 p.m. Aug. 10. Glen Hinkens and Jack Haen are in charge.

Persons wishing to donate items for the auction may bring them to the semitrailer truck which will be located at 500 Ann St. from Aug. 5-9. If the items are too large, the donors may call either chairman for assistance.

Caller wasn't lyin' about truck contents

KAUKAUNA — Among the variety of complaints police receive, smelly trucks are infrequent. Police here got such a call Wednesday afternoon.

Not only did the complainant say that a truck parked in the 900 block of Desnoyer Street smelled bad, he contended it contained a lion and two horses.

Upon investigation, skeptical officers discovered the caller was telling the truth. As onlookers gathered, the truck driver, from Texas, returned to his vehicle, explaining that the animals were part of a show to be held at Denmark.

The driver had gotten lost and parked the rig and its distinctive cargo while seeking aid in finding his way out of town. Kaukauna police were quick to oblige.

Supreme Court rules on tapes

The President of the United States is not above the law. Nor does he make the law. Nor does he alone interpret it. That in effect is what the United States Supreme Court has told Richard M. Nixon.

Nixon is ordered to turn over to Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski the tapes and other White House documents Jaworski has subpoenaed for use in prosecuting criminal cases resulting from Watergate.

There were three significant points made in the decision, which was unanimous among the eight justices participating. First, the court ruled that the court system did have jurisdiction over the dispute between the special prosecutor and the President. President Nixon had argued that it was strictly an internal dispute within the executive branch.

Secondly, the court held that the executive privilege of confidentiality could not be used to deny evidence needed by the court in a criminal proceeding.

And thirdly, the court ruled that "the judiciary, not the President, is the final arbiter of a claim of executive privilege." That was the decision of Federal District Judge John Sirica, whose reputation is considerably enhanced by the supreme court's endorsement.

It was coincidental, but significant, that the decision was handed down on the day that the House Judiciary Committee began public debate on impeachment charges. Submission of evidence to the committee has been completed, but if the court decision frees up additional tapes, it is presumed they will also be reviewed by the committee. If the President should refuse to obey the court order, or delays delivery, that act would also obviously be considered by the committee.

President Nixon's astute legal counsel, James D. St. Clair, has been conducting a diversionary campaign in his defense of the President against impeachment. It is the typical defense lawyer's tactic of delay, detour and confusion.

The Supreme Court's decision puts an end to that campaign. From now on President Nixon is going to have to answer directly to the American people as well as to the Congress for his transgressions.

Good news from Greece

The fall of the military government of Greece probably was not at all as sudden as it seemed. In fact the instability of that regime may have been responsible for the events of the last week on Cyprus.

In the extensive intrigues in both Greece and Cyprus and to a lesser extent in Turkey, it is difficult indeed to tell who or what has been pushing and what was being shoved. (See John P. Roche's column on this page.) Causes and effects have a way of becoming intermingled. It is still not clear whether the government in Athens led the revolt in Cyprus or whether that revolt was permitted to succeed temporarily in order to bring down the government in Athens.

It seems likely that the threat of war with Turkey and the possibilities of revolt in Greece itself prompted the colonels to call back former prime minister Constantine Caramanlis. Caramanlis had been in self-imposed exile and he is a supporter of the deposed king Constantine, now also an exile in Rome. He has also been a backer of Archbishop Makarios' rule in Cyprus.

It is obvious that the United States has suffered another blow to its prestige in its relationship to Greece the last few years. American interference in the domestic affairs of another nation should of course be intolerable. It was not up to Washington to throw out the colonels no matter how dictatorial their rule.

But the Nixon administration has given too much subtle backing to the military government. This even included ridiculous praise about stability by former vice president Spiro Agnew on a visit to Athens two years ago. Charges that the Central Intelligence Agency was actually involved in Greek intrigue on the side of the despots was even more alarming. The image of the United States as the staunch defender of liberty and justice was smeared. The fallacy of upholding one tyrannical government allegedly to keep in check another has been adequately demonstrated.

Spain's new king

When the announcement was made that Generalissimo Francisco Franco was "temporarily" delegating his powers to the royal heir, Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, a considerable amount of care was taken. The news was released during the sleepy lunch hour and the cities were quiet. Many people were away on vacation since the day before had been a national holiday.

It is surprising that there was concern because the Prince had been as thoroughly schooled in the Franco way as if the Generalissimo had been indeed his father. Although the delegation of power was given under Article 11 of Spain's Organic Laws, the preparation had been years in coming.

Franco had declared Spain once again a kingdom after its relatively brief excursion as a republic and then a dictatorship after Spain's bloody civil war. But it was 22 years before Franco got around to thinking it safe enough to name the royal heir. And then he felt enough in control to ignore traditional claims to the throne.

Prince Juan Carlos, through an agreement between his real father, Don Juan, son of the last king, Alfonso XIII, and Franco, completed his education in Spain since 1954, "the better" to serve his Fatherland in view of the position he occupies in the dynasty." Don Juan was the rightful heir but his views were too liberal for Franco. Six years ago Franco decided that time was running out or that Juan Carlos had learned his lessons ably enough. He was named the designated heir, eventually to have the title of King.

But even then Juan Carlos wasn't given much to do. He visited one ministry after the other, so presumably has learned how they operate, and he became acquainted with the top civilian and military leaders. But even when he requested responsibility, it was usually denied. He did not even play an important figurehead part since that too might detract from the aging and ailing Generalissimo.

Spain is not likely to become a constitutional republic with the young Juan Carlos at the controls. But it is quite likely it will never be quite the same again.

Day was logical choice for Supreme Court

MADISON — The appointment by Gov. Patrick Lucey of Roland Day, a Madison lawyer, old and close personal friend and practicing liberal politician, to the State Supreme Court was as predictable as any major decision made by the head of the Democratic state administration since he was sworn in nearly four years ago.

The uncertainty in the situation, if any, was caused by the abrupt and unprecedented launching of publicity campaigns during recent weeks by other candidates for the state's highest court.

The governor had toyed with the idea of choosing a very young person, man or woman. But it was evidently difficult to find a prospect of youthful years who had also attained sufficient professional stature to avoid the chance of offending the bench, bar and others of critical sophistication on the question of quality of performance of the high court.

He also was attracted by the idea of appointing a woman, but his private intelligence service reminded him that his nominee will have the task of fighting off rivals in an election two years hence. His first appointment of a woman several years ago to a minor court in Milwaukee was rebuffed by the electorate when she sought confirmation by the voters.

Roland Day is perhaps as well equipped to meet challengers when he becomes a candidate for election to his seat as anyone the governor had seriously considered. Indeed, he was prominently involved in politics even before Pat Lucey was known outside the precincts of Crawford County, where he had planned a political career at an uncommonly early age.

Day is a product of the old LaFollette Progressive faction in Wisconsin politics. Students in the state universities who are forever soliciting assistance on routine thesis and term paper assignments would find it fruitful to examine the rewards that have come to dozens of the younger men of the LaFollette political persuasion in the 1930s. They forsook the decaying Progressive party to move into the moribund Democratic organization even as their elders for the most part turned to the ancestral Republican affiliation and in the process restored the traditional two-party alignment of the rest of America to this state.

Roland Day is a successful lawyer and an amiable and energetic fellow. He was a star law student. Given his choice, he would no doubt have welcomed a longer term before being required to face the electorate with the certainty that some prominent names representing the lower courts will be on the ballot as challengers in 1976. But unlike some colleagues and predecessors on the state appeals court, he has had useful practice on the campaign trail. He was one of the star performers, as a young student, in the waning days of the LaFollette party nearly four decades ago.

An inconspicuous line in the Lucey press release confirming his selection of the new judge related that "in 1968, he was chairman of the Robert F. Kennedy organization in Wisconsin."

Those who know the governor's utter devotion to the Kennedy cause and the Kennedy lessons on the rewarding of the faithful found that irrelevant recollection revelatory. Indeed, it would not surprise anybody who knows the Lucey modus operandi if that footnote was inserted for the purpose of reminding his partisan constituency of his rules of practical politics.

By the test of the backgrounds of its members, the court for the second time in the modern history of the state will have a "liberal" majority with the seating of Roland Day. In other ways, so subtle that they may not be widely observed, the court will have a new balance with his swearing in.

Thoughts at large offered by Harris

It is not so much the drive for power itself as the desire to be attached to power that makes most men sacrifice morality for expediency.

We are rapidly reaching that fulcrum point in civilization where the production of garbage is beginning to outstrip the production of commodities.

A character is made both by what supports it and by what resists it; and the finest characters are those which have been tempered in this way, neither made flaccid by excessive support nor made brittle by excessive hardship.

Hatred is such a distorting emotion that even to hate hatred represents a kind of victory for the object.

"Scenario" is the modern word that, in practical politics, replaces "truth."

Philanthropy thrives on the acknowledgment that, while you can't buy your way into heaven, you may be able to donate your way in. (The fallacy here being that the more you have, the less meaning your gift has.)

The ultimate revolution will smash the pedestals along with the statues.

The source of man's tragedy is that he cannot live without general and abstract ideas—and yet such ideas inevitably lead him into fatally preposterous extremes, defending one aspect of reality against its contrary.

To refer to the "honor" of one's country marks one as a fool or a demagog; honor is a personal attribute, and can no more be possessed by a country than can virginity, humor, tastebuds, or corpulence.

Judging a man like Nixon means rising above partisan and political levels and applying the question asked by Wilhelm von Humboldt nearly two centuries ago: "What concept would we have of humanity if he were its only representative?"

My recent piece on highway slaughter and the ineptitude of drivers was ironically confirmed recently by U.S. Coast Guard figures showing that the most dangerous element in a Guardsman's life is not the sea but the road: last year the Coast Guard lost 32 men—23 by auto accident.

The same man who publicly praises "free enterprise" privately deplores "cut-throat competition."

What we have decided to call "normality" is simply the common denominator of our collective madness.

Cypriot crisis like chess game

Analyzing the situation on Cyprus is almost as depressing as exploring the variables in Northern Ireland. If one could possibly conceive of four-dimensional chess, the analogy would be applicable to both locales. To begin with, you have the existence of hostile tribes (African nations have no monopoly on tribalism) who have lived in uneasy equilibrium for centuries. The percentage of Turks in Cyprus is smaller (20 per cent) than the Catholic minority in Northern Ireland (roughly one-third), but this numerical disadvantage is more than compensated for by the irresponsible vigor with which Turkey defends their status. The Irish Republic, in contrast, has made every effort to cool the situation in the North as, of course, has Her Majesty's Government in London.

The historical background of Cypriot independence is interesting. It can be described briefly as an improvisation that developed a life of its own. Generations of Cypriot Greeks were solidly for "enosis" — union with Greece — but the Turks wouldn't stand for it. A nasty civil war began in 1954, with the poor British caught in the middle, and finally in 1959, a compromise was worked out providing guarantees for the Turkish minority in an independent Greek Cyprus. Archbishop Makarios — a strenuous advocate of "enosis," whom the British had tucked away on an island in the Indian Ocean — became President. At that time the Archbishop was closely aligned with Colonel George Grivas (the famed leader of the Greek terrorists who died last January), and the Turks, with considerable justification, believed that independence was just a way station on the road to union with Greece.

This suspicion was confirmed in 1953 when Makarios suggested some amendments to the Cyprus constitution which seemed to undermine the rights of the island's Turks. Shortly the two tribes were shooting at each other, and in 1964 the Turkish government launched a military feint to indicate its determination to protect its Cypriot compatriots. Even the irrepressible Krushchev got into the act, warning the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to keep out of the internal affairs of Cyprus or risk a threat to the "general peace." Off the issue went to the United Nations which established a peace-keeping force that is still there.

As of 1964, then, Makarios was still closely aligned with General Grivas and Greek Prime Minister Papandreou. In other words, it is fair to say that Cypriot independence was not at the top of the Archbishop-President's agenda. However, in 1967 an event occurred which threw all the chessmen back into the box: the Greek coup, which brought a right-wing military regime to power in Athens. This was bad news to the Greek Cypriots who had sponsored a generally left-wing policy (including nonalignment in the Cold War) and had a strong Communist party.

Cypriot independence immediately attained a new luster. "Enosis" with a Greece run by a center-left government was one thing; union with a military dictatorship was something else again. At this time Grivas denounced Makarios for a double-cross and initiated guerrilla activities against the Cypriot regime. But, curiously, the Greek junta turned out to be much more restrained on the Cyprus issue than its democratic predecessors. For one thing, it did not have to respond to Greek public opinion; also, it had substantial respect for the military who, through dummy governments, were running Turkey. While it is overstating the facts to say that the two sets of generals reached a modus vivendi on Cyprus, it was certainly true that they established a modus non vivendi. (In fact the Athens junta recalled Grivas from Cyprus and put him virtually under house arrest.)

Why the problem should explode in 1974 is hard to explain except in terms of accident. Makarios apparently had decided (wisely) to send home the Greek officers who trained the Cypriot National Guard, and when this decision leaked, the officers struck. Athen was obviously caught completely by surprise. Then the Turkish government, ironically a left-of-center coalition based on genuine elections, overreacted. Twice before the Turkish military had engaged in bluffs involving mobilizing troops and transports off Cyprus, but pulled them back. This time Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit — who unlike the Generals takes public opinion into consideration — pulled the trigger.

As of this writing everything is firmly in midair, but my hunch is that when the smoke clears Makarios will be back presiding over an independent Cyprus: the solution which will least divide all concerned.

100 YEARS AGO
Appleton Crescent, July 25, 1874.

On Monday last, there was a lively fire in the woods about a mile this side of Menasha alongside the road, doubtless started by someone trying to burn brush and logs during the dryness prevailing, and the fire spread fast. The grass is so dry it burned as well as in October.

Had it not been for the hard work done by a lot of men and the fact that the fire had run into a low, green grassy piece of land, it might have made havoc among the barns and fences.

Farmers have no business to endanger the lives and property of themselves and others during the prevailing drought, by setting fires they may afterward find difficult to control.

The grass, ground and timber is in perfect condition for fires to become unmanageable if once well started, and we certainly do not want to see the dread scenes of 1871 repeated this summer. (Editor's Note: The reference was to the Peshtigo fire of October 1871.)

Executive privilege not absolute, justices say

BY W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — "It is emphatically the province and duty of the judicial department to say what the law is," Chief Justice John Marshall wrote 171 years ago.

Wednesday, ruling in the case of President Nixon and the Watergate tapes, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger found those words handy to express his meaning.

"It's 'emphatically the province and duty' of this court to 'say what the law is' with respect to the claim of privilege presented in this case," Burger wrote for eight justices of the court.

"What the law is" boiled down to this:

Yes, the President has a privilege to withhold confidential communications within the executive branch from public scrutiny.

No, that privilege is not absolute but is subject to review by the courts.

It was the first time in the nearly 185-year history of the court that it had been confronted with a claim such as the one advanced by Nixon: that only the President can decide whether he should provide evidence wanted for a criminal trial.

In answering the question, the court said it agrees with Nixon that it is important for conversations between high government officials and their advisers to be confidential.

"Human experience teaches that those who expect public dissemination of their remarks may well temper candor with a concern for appearances,"

Jaworski seeks prompt delivery of Nixon tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski moved today to seek a prompt order from U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica to speed delivery of the 64 Watergate tapes and documents the Supreme Court said President Nixon must surrender.

The prosecutor's office announced it would submit a motion to Sirica later in the day, requesting him to direct presidential compliance with the order.

Presidential attorney James St. Clair, in announcing Nixon's decision Wednesday night to comply with the historic high court directive, said a "time-consuming process' was needed to prepare the tapes and related materials.

A Jaworski spokesman said the special prosecutor's office believes 33 of the tapes and documents are virtually ready to be turned over.

Of these, 20 were included in the partial White House transcripts released last Spring, 12 others were given Nixon by appointments secretary Stephen Bull at that time and a partial transcript of one was supplied the House Judiciary Committee by St. Clair last week, the spokesman added.

Nixon announced his decision to comply with the ruling "in all respects" in a statement issued through St. Clair at the Western White House in San Clemente, Calif. eight hours after the court issued its 8-0 ruling Wednesday.

While I am disappointed in the result, I respect and accept the court decision, and I have instructed Mr. St. Clair to take whatever measures are necessary to comply with that decision in all respects," Nixon said

The President had challenged Jaworski's subpoena for the tapes and materials. The special prosecutor said they were needed for the Watergate cover-up trial of six former White House and campaign aides, scheduled to start Sept. 9. The defendants include H. R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman and John N. Mitchell.

After the tapes and documents are submitted to Judge Sirica, he must screen them for relevance before mak-

Impeachment views aired by members of Judiciary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Winding through day and night impeachment debate, the House Judiciary Committee today heard a Republican plead for fairness to President Nixon and a Democrat urge his ouster for "open and notorious defiance of the law "

Opening the second round of the nationally televised colloquy, Republican Rep. Charles E. Wiggins of California declared Nixon "is entitled to a presumption of innocence."

The second speaker, Democratic Rep. John Conyers of Michigan, countered that Nixon must be removed from office "to restore to our government the proper balance of constitutional power and serve notice to all future presidents that such abuse of conduct ... never again be tolerated."

At specific issue was a two-article resolution of impeachment charging Nixon with obstruction of justice and other abuses of the presidency including contempt of Congress.

Not since 1868, when Andrew Johnson was exonerated by the Senate, had any such effort to remove a President gotten so far.

Conyers, one of the outspoken Nixon critics on the committee, charged the President was responsible for "wholesale violation of the constitutional rights of citizens."

He also sharply criticized Nixon's refusal to comply with the panel's subpoenas, declaring: "Unto this day the President is in open and notorious defiance of the law because he has failed to comply with the directives of this committee to produce the documents that we needed ..."

Wiggin's plea for fairness came despite Tuesday's claim from other GOP defender of the President that a committee decision against Nixon is assured.

Wiggins has frequently been characterized as Nixon's most articulate defender on the committee, but he told the committee's second session of formal debate that "I wince" at that label because he believes simply that the

Cross-district busing integration plan voided

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today struck down by a 5-4 vote, a controversial desegregation plan calling for busing pupils across school district lines in the Detroit area.

The decision sent the case back to U.S. District Court in Detroit, where the plan was approved two years ago by the late Judge Steven J. Roth.

Another judge will now consider the matter.

The Supreme Court said Roth erred in ordering a desegregation plan embracing both Detroit and its suburbs without any evidence as to whether the suburban districts were segregated.

The lower court was directed to formulate desegregation plan for the city itself.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, speaking for the court, said federal courts may not impose multidistrict desegregation plans where there is no finding that all the school districts included had failed to operate integrated school systems.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, the only black member of the court, dissented, saying:

"We deal here with the right of all of our children, whatever their race, to an equal start in life and to an equal opportunity to reach their full potential as citizens. Those children who have been denied that right in the past deserve better than to see fences thrown up to deny them that right in the future."

Also dissenting were Justices William O. Douglas, William J. Brennan

Hoaxer pretends she's Pat Hearst

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman tricked police into believing she was fugitive heiress Patricia Hearst and was willing to surrender, bringing 150 policemen to a North Hollywood apartment.

Police officials called off their operation early today after the hoax unfolded:

—Miss Hearst's parents and sister flew anxiously to Los Angeles from San Francisco. Her father was "very disappointed," and the family quickly returned home.

—Officers surrounded an apartment building, blocked off streets and negotiated by telephone with the hoaxer, who said she wanted to surrender to "Uncle George." Rumors later buzzed that Miss Hearst had been in the apartment building but had escaped.

—A police spokesman said officers raided an apartment but found only a cat, a .22-caliber rifle and an automatic shotgun. Three persons who were in the apartment, including a 13-year-old girl who bears a strong resemblance to Miss Hearst, said they were grabbed by detectives and questioned.

Police said the guns had a legitimate owner with no connection to the Symbionese Liberation Army, which kidnaped Miss Hearst at Berkeley, Calif., in February.

The hoaxer wasn't found, and a police spokesman said later "we had no evidence that Miss Hearst or any SLA member was ever there."

After all the excitement, Police Chief Ed Davis summed up the Wednesday night operation as "a good command exercise." Lt. Dan Cook, the police spokeman said it was "a practice in futility."

It all began when three persons called police between 6 and 6:30 p.m. and said a woman fitting the description of Miss Hearst, who after her abduction renounced her family and said she was joining her terrorist captors.

Police said the three callers said the woman who entered the building was followed later by a black man carrying a rifle.

Officers went to the building, contacted the manager and showed her photographs of Miss Hearst and SLA members William and Emily Harris, all being sought on a variety of state and federal charges. The manager, Marcella Tyler, identified Miss Hearst and Mrs. Harris as being seen in the building, police said.

Later she told newsmen she was positive she saw Miss Hearst, but she wouldn't elaborate.

Police massed near the building. A Special Qeapons and Tactics squad team arrived, on of those which spearheaded a fiery gun battle in which six members of the SLA died here May 17.

A woman who said she was inside telephoned police and said she wanted to give herself up to "Uncle George." Miss Hearst's cousin, George Hearst Jr., is publisher of the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner. Her uncle, George Hearst Sr., died in 1972.

"We should have realized that Hearst Sr. was dead and that the call was a hoax," Chief Davis said.

Police refused to say how long they talked to the woman or whether she identified herself as Miss Hearst. But officers believed she could have been the heiress "because of the detailed information she gave," Cook said.

Karen Cunca, 19, her husband, Edward, 22, and 13-year-old Kelly Ravenscroft were playing cards in the apartment that police believed was occupied by the newspaper heiress.

"Someone came and began banging on the door," said Cunca. "It was a neighbor who said to lock the doors and windows because Patty Hearst was in the complex.

"I ran out of the apartment and a couple of detectives grabbed us and said they wanted to talk to us. They took us down the street and into the manager's apartment for questioning and then let us go."

The guns were owned by a friend, Chris Garza, 20, who also lived in the apartment, said Mrs. Cunca. "They're hunting rifles," she said. "Chris likes to hunt."

Garza was not in the apartment, but police said after the four-hour operation that he was checked out and "was clean."

10 hostages held by Texas inmates

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Prison officials began moving tear gas equipment today into a state prison unit where armed convicts threatened to kill 10 hostages.

W. J. Estelle Jr., director of the Texas Department of Corrections, said the situation was "stable," and "negotiations are going on by telephone." He refused comment about the equipment.

An armed takeover of a third-floor library was led by Fred Gomez Carrasco, a prisoner serving a life sentence, prison authorities said.

Prison information director Ron Taylor, when asked about reports of shooting, said no one had been shot and killed. But when asked if no one had been shot, he responded, "I'm not saying that."

Taylor went back inside the ivy-covered prison fortress when asked to comment on the presence of tear gas equipment.

Early today prison guards began bringing into the downtown prison compound three gas generators, gas mask boxes and what appeared to be a supply of weapons.

Authorities said seven convicts were with the hostages, but one of the convicts was not believed to be an active participant in the rebellion.

The hostages are seven women and three men, said Dr. Don Kirkpatrick, assistant director of the Texas Department of Corrections. One of the men is a guard and the other hostages are civilian teachers and librarians.

Kirkpatrick told newsmen Wednesday night that Carrasco had demanded six bullet-proof vests, three bullet-proof helmets and visors, three walkie-talkie radios, three M16 automatic rifles, five magazines of ammunition, 100 loose rounds for each rifle and "suitable clothing for the three of us."

Kirkpatrick said Carrasco, who was sentenced to life for assault with attempt to murder a police officer at San Antonio, had threatened to execute the hostages if the demands were not met.

"Mr. Carrasco is not pushing us for any time deadline," Kirkpatrick said. "It is also interesting to note there have been no transportation demands."

Kirkpatrick said there was only a double door leading into the library and Carrasco was making the hostages sit in front of it, rotating them about every 20 minutes.

This prevented sharpshooters from firing into the room, Kirkpatrick said.

He said several of the convicts had talked to their lawyers.

In addition to Carrasco, the other convicts were identified as Rudolfo Dominguez of San Antonio, serving a 15-year term for assault to murder; Ignacio Cuevas, a Mexican national serving 45 years for murder; Florecio Vera, 29, of San Antonio, 10 years for burglary; Martin Cuiroz, 27, of Houston, two years for possession of codeine, a narcotic; Henry S. Escamilla, 40, of San Antonio, five years for shoplifting; and Stephen Ray Robertson, 26, Dallas, 16 years for rape.

Kirkpatrick said, however, that he did not believe Robertson was an active participant.

The rebels' demands were delivered to officials by the prison chaplain, the Rev. Joseph O'Brien, a Roman Catholic priest who was in and out of the library several times Wednesday night conferring with Carrasco. Carrasco served as a porter in the prison chapel.

Prison authorities said Carrasco and his companions took control of the library about 1 p.m. Wednesday, brandishing three handguns. Officials said they did not know where the convicts obtained the weapons because correctional officers at the prison do not carry arms.

The convicts originally took 11 hostages, but one, Glennon Johnson, 51, suffered an apparent heart attack about 9:30 p.m. and Carrasco freed him.

Johnson was reported in stable condition at a Huntsville hospital.

Prison officials said there were 57 inmates in the library at the time of the takeover, including Carrasco.

The rebels let 50 inmates leave immediately and another three left some 5½ hours later, just before Father O'Brien emerged from his first conference with the rebels.

Chenault to get public defender in King case

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Superior Court Judge Luther Alverson has declared the man accused of fatally shooting Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr. to be a pauper and said the court will appoint a public defender to assist in his defense.

At the same time, the lawyer who has been representing Marcus Wayne Chenault said he would continue in the case.

Chenault, 23, faces two murder charges and one of aggravated assault in the June 30 slayings at Ebenezer Baptist Church of Mrs. King and deacon Edward Boykin, and the wounding of Mrs. Jimmie Mitchell. The shootings occurred during Sunday church services.

FVTI against aid formula for state districts

BY MAIJA PENIKIS
and TONY WALTER
Post-Crescent staff writers

A proposed state aid formula for vocational districts that is supposed to benefit districts with lower per capita property valuations and higher unemployment rates is being opposed by the Fox Valley Technical Institute administration.

The State Vocational, Technical and Adult Education Board authorized its staff to develop a new formual at the meeting this week, after Fred Hiestand, assistant state vocational, technical and adult education director, made the presentation.

According to that presentation, FVTI would receive more aid under the new formula, although its percentage of state aids would be reduced slightly.

The state statistics show that under the present formula, which takes only the full-time equivalency students into account, FVTI would receive $7.8 million in the 1975-77 biennium, but would receive $8.4 million under the new formula, which takes into account four factors.

The dollar figure cited by the state office is what has the FVTI administrators perplexed.

"I don't see any way we can get more aid under the new formula because our valuation is quite high and the statistics they are basing their figures on for the new formula is purely guesswork," stated Donald Beno, FVTI finance director.

According to the present formula, state aids are calculated by multiplying the average cost per student times the number of full-time equivalent students in the district.

The average cost stands at $995 per full-time equivalent student. The state, which compiles these statistics, is so far behind in letting the local districts know the final figures, that they are only guesswork at this time, Beno explained.

"What I am guessing at is that we have 3,400 students aidable at this time. But I am not certain, so if the state has the final statistics, they haven't supplied them to us," he said.

The plan submitted by Hiestand, called the multi-faceted equity formula, gives 50 per cent consideration to the district full-time student total and 25 per cent each to the property valuation and unemployment rate. In addition, funds will be distributed to districts for unique and innovative local projects for disadvantaged and handicapped people.

The FVTI people claim, however, that they don't even have the unemployment rate of each of the taxing communities in the district, and feel that anything the state has is guesswork, "on which they are basing their formula."

Hiestand stated that he expects a 12 per cent enrollment increase in the state VTAE system during the next biennium and that the new formula would require $104 million in state tax funds, well above the $74 million paid to districts in the current biennium.

Under the present formula, about $96 million would be paid to districts in 1975-77.

He also told the state board that paying 50 per cent of the aids from the student enrollment would reward districts for effort in recruiting students to their programs. The property valuation would gauge a district's ability to pay

Joint bicycle trail plan possible

CHILTON — Authorization was given by the Calumet County Planning and Zoning Committee Wednesday night to have county planner Roland Tonn work with Outagamie County planner Robert Stadel in preparing possible bicycle routes to High Cliff State Park and estimated costs.

At a joint committee meeting, Nick Karras, Appleton, told the Calumet committee that the East-Central Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission was involved in establishing a master plan and the bicycle trails have to be worked out before funds could be obtained.

Because of the demand for trails to High Cliff, reported in a study made by Stadel, the meeting was arranged to see if a cooperative venture could be established. Tonn said there had been little demand for such trails in Calumet County. However, it was established by the group that there was a need, both as a safety factor as a coming mode of transportation and for recreational enjoyment.

Donald Schultz, Town of Harrison supervisor who recently asked the Calumet County Highway Safety Committee to establish bicycle trails from Appleton to High Cliff, said he felt that Winnebago County should be involved in view of the number of persons riding bicycles from the Neenah-Menasha area to High Cliff.

Mr. and Mrs. Schultz asked that the committee consider a route from the Appleton-Neenah-Menasha area in addition to one suggested by Outagamie County highway commissioner Clarence Brownson along State 55 from the College Avenue extension near Kaukauna. Brownson said the extension had sufficient right-of-way for bicycle trails.

Mrs. Schultz pointed out the many serious bicycle accidents in Calumet County and charged, "Chilton is not in the center of the problem area. We do not have enough contact to let you know we have a problem." She referred to the lack of toll-free telephone service between Harrison residents and the sheriff at Chilton. Karras stressed the need for early action, stating that $2 million had been allowed for each state for bicycle trails on every federal highway and 50 per cent of the cost of preparing the a study was also available.

The possibility of establishing paths which could be used for bicycles in summer and snowmobiles in winter was discussed but was not compatible in view of the fact that bicycles needed paved paths and snowmobiles unpaved routes. Mrs. Judy Hebbe, a member of the Outagamie panel, noted that from maps presented, each county had snowmobile routes established in areas which were not demanding bicycle trails.

Calumet committee members said they were afraid they would not be able to convince the county board to approve bicycle trails if they were localized, noting that supervisors from areas not included in the plans would not support them. Only two of the Calumet County Planning and Zoning Committee members are county supervisors. Citizen members are appointed for seven-year terms.

Karras stated that the Outagamie committee had been working on the bicycle trail problem for three years and was being criticized for "doing nothing." He said he felt the Calumet County Board would have to act on requests, and if requests for other areas were made, it should take that into consideration. The planners were left to work out plans for trails on roadside rights-of-way or cross-county routes to be presented at another committee meeting in about two weeks.

Dix plans to fight order removing his name from ballot

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent staff writer

KAUKAUNA — The name of Russel Dix has been ordered removed from the September primary ballot in the 5th Assembly District, but Dix, the only challenger to incumbent William Rogers, D-Kaukauna, said he intends to contest the removal through legal channels.

The new state Elections Board ordered the name removed from the primary ballot because Dix's nomination papers didn't contain the minimum number of valid signatures.

Rogers, a Democrat seeking his seventh consecutive two-year term, said he didn't initiate the investigation, but that his friend, state Rep. Bert Grover, D-Shawano, asked for the investigation after Grover's ex-aide learned there might be a discrepancy in Dix's nomination papers.

Official state records show that Dix submitted 233 signatures, well over the required minimum of 200, but that the elections board staff review revealed that 41 of these signatures belonged either to persons living outside the 5th District or to persons who had already signed Rogers' papers.

Dix didn't deny he may have had such signatures, but contended Wednesday that he had turned in 251 on his petitions with his nomination papers.

In any case, if Dix is off the ballot, Rogers will have no primary or November election opponents. Dix said he wouldn't seek a write-in campaign because "I would have no chance" to win.

The challenge of the Dix nomination paper signatures was initiated officially by Ronald Steinhoff, state Democratic party executive secretary, who wrote elections supervisor Leo Fahey July 15 to request an investigation.

Rogers

The review showed that residents of the towns of VandenBrock, Greenleaf, Freedom, Black Creek, the City of De Pere, the City of Seymour, and wards in the City of Appleton outside the 5th District signed Dix's nomination papers.

The election board voted unanimously to remove Dix from the ballot. The motion was made by Democratic party administrative committee member Joanne Wells and seconded by Esther Kaplan, former campaign treasurer for U.S. Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis.

The removal of Dix marks the third time this year that the elections board has taken a name off the ballot because of a discrepancy. Dix is the first Democrat to be eliminated.

Steinhoff said in his letter that he was requesting the investigation after being told of the discrepancy by "an in-

Smoldering remains

Piles of smoldering rubbish are all that remain of the 40- by 80-foot barn that burned Wednesday morning on the farm of Roger Schultz, three miles north of Clintonville. Lost in the blaze were 11 heifers, about 90 tons of hay, barn cleaner, silo unloader, milking machine and the milk house. Clintonville volunteer firemen answered the call. There is no damage estimate yet. The barn was partially covered by insurance. (Post-Crescent photo)

Speener hearing is Aug. 8 as attempt to delay it fails

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent staff writer

A public hearing to determine if there is sufficient cause to fire Outagamie County Health Center Supt. Eugene K. Speener will be held at 9 a.m. Aug. 8.

Health center trustees refused an attempt by Speener's attorney, Dennis Herrling, to delay the hearing at least another month during a Wednesday afternoon meeting that Herrling tried to move behind closed doors.

Herrling said he will have written, pre-hearing motions challenging the sufficiency of civil charges of misconduct, malfeasance, neglect, inefficiency and dereliction in office, brought against Speener last month by two private detectives who were hired to investigate him.

Trustees scheduled a hearing on the motions for 11 a.m. Aug. 2.

Herrling was unsuccessful in attempts to have the press and the public barred from Wednesday's meeting and he did not succeed in getting trustees John Wylie and Kelland Lathrop, both attorneys, to disqualify themselves from presiding at the Aug. 8 hearing.

Trustees also voted down a move by Herrling to force the two private detectives, Joseph Dresden and Ronald Marquardt, to post bonds.

They should be required to back up their charges with bonds in amounts sufficient to cover the cost of the hearing, including attorney fees, Herrling argued.

Trustee President Sylvester Esler wondered if the bond requirement shouldn't be extended to persons who "squawked to the investigators." Esler was referring to persons interviewed by the detectives.

Wylie, who joined Lathrop in voting against the bond requirement, said he did not believe that the charges were brought maliciously.

"If they shoot off their mouth, they should be required to post bonds," Esler remarked.

On Wednesday, trustees voted to pass over Corp. Counsel William Schuh and have Bayorgeon represent them at Speener's hearing.

Wylie told Schuh there was "no slight intended," and added that the hearing was a special matter, outside the normal business of the corporation counsel's office. Wylie also thought Schuh might not have time to handle the matter.

Objections were voiced by Esler and Herrling. Esler recalled that attorney John Menn had told trustees recently that he could not represent them on another matter because, according to a 1944 attorney general's opinion, they could not hire outside legal counsel.

However, Lathrop said he found a state statute that permits them to go beyond the corporation counsel's office for assistance. Wylie agreed with Lathrop's findings.

Herrling said it was a conflict of interest to have Bayorgeon handle both the investigation and the prosecution.

The county board gave trustees $2,500 to conduct the Speener investigation. Bayorgeon has told trustees his investigative bill does not approach that amount.

Herrling reminded Wylie that several months ago Wylie stated publicly that he had information about Speener that might warrant his firing. If he does have such information, Herrling argued, he should disqualify himself as a "judge" in the Speener case.

If a judge or a juror was given such information, he would withdraw, Herrling said.

Wylie said Lathrop also was present when the unnamed source volunteered the information, but he said neither of them pursued the matter. Instead, the information was given to Bayorgeon. Wylie and Lathrop said they had no intention of disqualifying themselves.

Herrling will be given a list of witnesses expected to testify at the hearing. He said he wants to examine them adversely before the hearing.

Many of the witnesses reportedly will be past and present health center employes.

Herrling wanted Wednesday's meeting closed because, he argued, personnel would be discussed. Speener, who was not present, did not waive his right to executive session, Herrling said.

Esler made a motion to close the meeting, but the other two trustees agreed with Schuh that the meeting was called to set a hearing date and to discuss hearing procedures and, therefore, could not legally be closed.

Winds whip rain into area during night

The rain Fox Valley residents hoped would break the area's recent hot spell finally arrived while most people were sleeping Wednesday night.

At midnight, it had not rained, but by 6 a.m. there had been .69 inch in Appleton accompanied by an average 11-mile-an-hour wind, with gusts to 23 miles an hour between 3 and 4 a.m. The strongest winds occurred between 6 and 7 a.m., when average winds of 20 miles an hour peaked at 34 miles an hour.

Reports of damage in the area were minimal. A utility pole and live wires were knocked down, apparently by wind, at the corner of Algoma and E. Pine streets in New London, but that pole appeared to have been partialiy rotted.

The only other specific report of wind damage was a broken branch at the corner of Sixth and Elm streets in Appleton.

With a steady rain falling at 9 a.m., rainfall, reported by Wisconsin Michigan Power Co., was at .90 inch.

Grace begins year in Clintonville

BY MILDRED LAIB
Post-Crescent staff writer

CLINTONVILLE — "Everything is so new to me," said Grace Gogchigol, the city's American Field Service (AFS) student for the 1974-75 school year, on her second day here.

Grace arrived Sunday at the home of her American family, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Giersbach, route 3. Their daughter, Sue, is on an East African tour, so she will meet her AFS sister later.

"I like it here right now. Everything is so green, which reminds me of home. Monday evening, on a ride in the country with my American parents, I saw my first deer," Grace said. "Also, I have seen my first horse and herds of cows."

Grace's home is Yap, an island in the western Carolines in the Pacific Ocean. It is south of Japan and east of the Philippines. The Yapese are of Malay origin. Yap has a total land area of 38.7 square miles. Agriculture is the principal occupation and copra is the principal money crop.

Grace, 18, will be a senior at the high school along with Sue Giersbach. She has seven sisters and two brothers, ranging in age from 7 to 28. Her father is a meat cutter at a local market at home. Having an American brother-in-law, who is a manager of the Yap Branch of the Bank of Hawaii, has helped Grace become familiar in many ways with the United States even before arriving here.

Grace has attended public schools in Yap and has had a number of American teachers. She has taken courses in School bids rejected in Waupaca

BY FERN SMITH
Post-Crescent staff writer

WAUPACA — The board of education Tuesday opened bids for the sale of the three-room Golden Hill School at Rural, but eventually rejected the top bid of $11,900 and decided to sell the property through a real estate broker.

The building, constructed as a one-room school in 1944 and enlarged in 1955, is located on a lot 220 by 256 feet, with a parking lot across State 22.

Sealed bids — ranging from $6,550 down to $3,101 — were submitted by Ward Owen, Fred Mannel and Carl Kaiser. Board President Everett Anderson opened the session to oral bidding at which Owen and Manne briskly countered offers. Owen made a final bid of $11,900 for the total package.

The buildings and grounds committee of the board, after a half-hour closed session to consider the offer, then recommended rejection of all bids. The board approved the recommendation unanimously, believing a private sale would be more advantageous financially.

The board had reserved the right to refuse all bids.

A 9.5 per cent salary increase was approved for custodial salaries. Shifts in personnel and the combination of two positions effected a total salary package for custodians in 1974-75 of $86,980, including overtime. These salaries, plus the salary of the building and grounds superintendent and two crossing guards total $101,500, compared with last year's budget of $115,000.

Donald Chinnery, building and ground superintendent, was given a one-year contract, effective July 1, at an annual salary of $15,000, including 10 paid holidays and two weeks of vacation after the first year.

Contracts were signed with Edward A. Mathwig, counselor at the high school level; Stephen Frey and James Kleinschmidt, both for grade 5; and Mrs. Peggy Pacocha, middle school home economics.

Mathwig taught five years in the Waupaca system and was guidance counselor at Omro for a year and a half. Frey and Kleinschmidt each have two years of teaching experience. Mrs. Pacocha, a recent graduate of the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point, was a student teacher in the Waupaca Middle School.

Supt. Len Brittell briefed the board on the faculty status for the coming year. "We are well on our way to meeting the goals we set for improving our educational program, as projected two years ago," he commented. "We have two high school counselors, one middle school counselor and required career counseling in kindergarten through

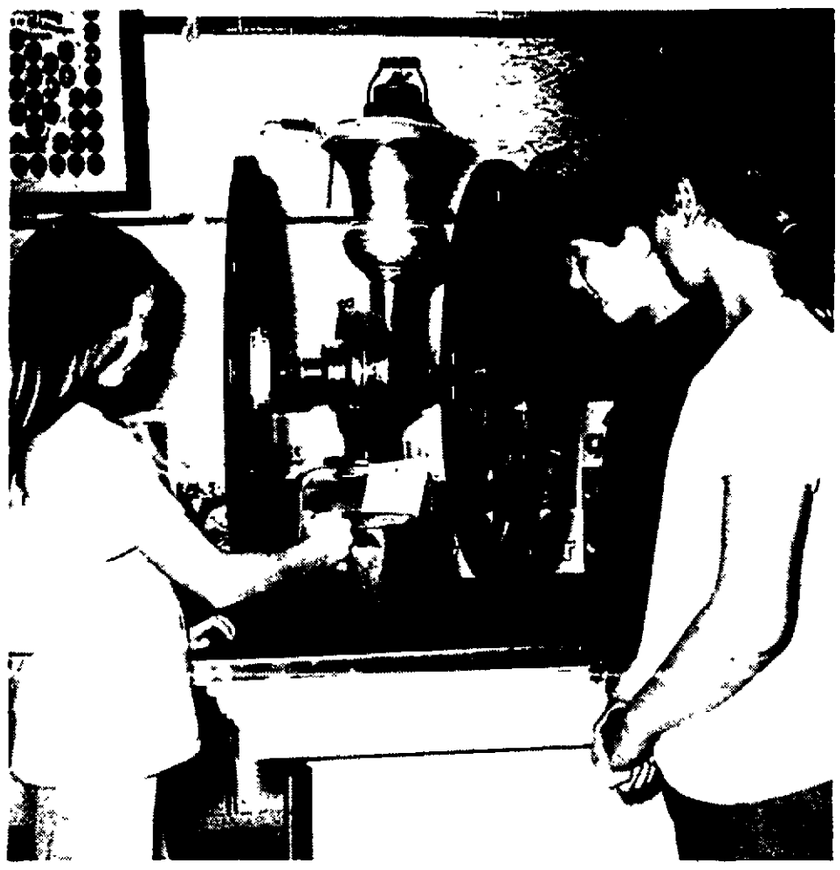
Accident on Columbia Lake hurts 2

WAUPACA — Patrick Haas, 9, and his sister, Kathleen, 11, are recovering satisfactorily from injuries received Monday in a boating accident on Columbia Lake.

Patrick received facial and abdominal injuries and is still under treatment at Riverside Community Hospital here. Kathleen, who has a bruised back, was released from the hospital Wednesday.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Haas, Glenview, Ill., who were visiting their grandmother, were fishing when their boat was struck by another craft operated by Tyrell Travers, 14, Bancroft, as it traveled toward the Casino channel, according to a preliminary report. Travers was accompanied by his father, Glenn. They were not injured. The accident is under investigation.



Three ski films to be shown in Chilton Aug. 2

CHILTON — Three films on skiing will be shown free to area skiers at 7 p.m. Aug. 2 in the courthouse assembly room.

Ski patrol members and those interested in beginner ski classes are welcome. Ski trips for this winter will be discussed if there is interest shown.

A 5-H club for all ages will be formed beginning Aug. 2. It will include the 4-H's — head, heart, hands and health — as well as "home" for family fun. Charter members enrolling before Sept. 30 have no entry charge. Individuals or family units joining later will pay enrollment fees to help reduce costs of transportation tickets, insurance and other expenses for the group during the year.

Camping, canoeing and family overnight bike trips will be planned for August and September. Special ski schools will be arranged for the group members. The scuba diving classes cancelled this summer will be included in the program if there is enough interest. Films scheduled Aug. 2 are The Moebius Flip, The White Badge and Steamboat A Comin. The program is expected to end by 8:30 p.m.

9 named to Calumet's commission on aging

CHILTON — Nine county residents have been appointed by G. J. Hipke, county board chairman, to the newly established commission on aging.

Selected were Merlin Weiting, Brillion; Wilma Springer, Appleton; Alvin Ott Jr., Town of Brillion; Howard A. Schucht and Mrs. Leona Wenninger, both of Chilton; Clarence A. Pagel, Brillion; Bruno Kern, Town of Brothertown; Leonard McMunn, New Holstein; and Edgar Daun, Town of Stockbridge.

The committee will study the needs of the aged in Calumet County.

Two zone change amendments passed by Calumet, one denied

CHILTON — Two motions requesting amendments to the Calumet County zoning map on certain lands in the county were passed Tuesday by the county board. Another was denied.

One zone change will be in the Town of Harrison near Waverly Beach where approximately 873 feet will be zoned commercial, making a one-half mile strip of land entirely commercial.

The portion rezoned was requested by the First National Bank of Neenah for the purpose of construction of a branch bank. No opposition to the move was voiced at a public hearing July 11. However, the county planning and zoning committee felt that some communication should be had with the state Division of Highways with regard to highway access. County Planner Roland Tonn reported at the meeting that he had contacted the division of highways and that it did not object to rezoning the land. It was noted, however, that such rezoning should not negate present access covenants along U.S. 10.

These covenants are also on the land being purchased by the bank and it was suggested by the division that the time might be ripe for the committee to present the division with a proposal for an alternate means of access so the abutting lands may be served and yet the integrity of the highway preserved.

Tonn said he notified the bank of the division's comments.

The other zone change approved was in the Town of Brillion. This is for the purpose of construction of a shed for commercial use to expand the business of Jewel Meetz' body shop. The change was from agricultural to commercial. No objection was voiced at the hearing.

A zone change request from James Ecker, for the purpose of construction of an asphalt business in the Town of Charlestown, was denied by the board on the recommendation by the county planning and zoning committee. It was noted that much opposition was expressed against the plant at the public hearing.

In other action, the board received a communication from Mayor Jerome Wink of New Holstein requesting some financial aid toward the construction of a library.

In his letter to the board, Wink said construction would come close to the $287,000 figure with substantial help anticipated from local sources. Library use has expanded, not only in New Holstein but throughout the entire county, with about 6,000 volumes loaned out of the New Holstein Public Library annually.

The letter was referred to the finance committee for further study.

One other communication received by the board was from Wilfred Gries, 327 Columbus Ave., Brillion. Gries contended the county police protection costs to the cities of Chilton, New Holstein and Brillion are an unfair tax burden. "We feel strongly about deleting county police costs from our next county tax bill," the letter stated. "Each one of the above cities has its own police protection and any additional costs or protection should be borne by the area where it is needed."

He also asked that the board consider hiring additional men and not placing any more burden on the cities that are already taxed double for police protection. The letter was referred to the protection of persons and property committee.

Day camp slated at Keller's Lake for handicapped

WAUPACA — Plans are being completed for a week of day camp from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Aug. 5-9 at Keller's Lake.

There will be bus service throughout the county for campers and staff. Anyone not receiving an application form to attend camp should call the director, Mrs. C. H. Rafoth, Clintonville. There is no charge to attend camp, which is sponsored by the Waupaca County Association for Retarded Citizens.

Volunteer counselors and aides are still needed, especially high school, college age or older men, because many of the campers are boys and young men who need male companionship. Those interested should contact one of the camp committee or Mrs. Rafoth. The camping program gives handicapped citizens an opportunity to experience the fun of the out-of-doors.

Training for the volunteer staff will be from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. July 31 at Keller's Lake.

The camp committee will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday to finalize plans for the day camp. Serving on the committee are Mrs. Rafoth, Mrs. Gordon Meiklejohn, Waupaca; Mrs. Robert Lieberman, Manawa; Mrs. LeRoy Raddatz, Sugarbush; Mrs. Robert Fuhrmann, New London; and Mrs. Violet Viitanen, Clintonville.

Shiocton schools approve budget

SHIOCTON — Voters in the joint school district have approved the proposed budget of $1,140,783, an increase of $88,452 over last year's budget.

The school tax levy was temporarily set at $15 per $1,000 of equalized valuation. Board President Milan Ratsch said a definite tax rate could not be set until October when 1974 equalized valuations are certified by the state Department of Revenue.

The largest increase in the budget is due to salary increases for teachers, administration, bus drivers, custodians, food service and secretarial personnel as well as increased cost of supplies and materials used in all departments. The purchase of a new school bus and increased fixed charges for teacher retirement benefits and hospitalization insurance benefits also added to increases.

The district again will furnish free textbooks and Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association insurance to all students in the school system.

Salaries of the board will remain at $300 per year and 10 cents per mile and $10 per meeting attended outside the school district. The board also was authorized to borrow money on short-term loans if necessary.

Discussion on the hot lunch program revealed that the cost of operations in the last three years has increased by $15,000 but the price of lunch tickets has remained the same. The board voted to increase the ticket price by five cents per day for students and 15 cents for adults. Pupils in grades one through eight will pay $1.50 per week or 30 cents per day. High school students will pay $1.75 per week or 35 cents per day and adults, including teachers, cooks and custodians, will pay 50 cents per day. The board also was authorized to raise the price of tickets another five cents per day at the end of the first semester of the school year if it felt it was necessary.

The athletic program was discussed and the code of ethics for athletes was said to be working well. The purchase of a weight machine for the athletes was left to the board's discretion.

A lengthy discussion on the starting and closing dates of school and make-up days for those missed because of snowstorms resulted in no satisfactory conclusion. The electors decided to allow the school board to decide when school will begin in the fall and when vacations will be.

while the unemployment rate factor would indicate need.

According to the assistant director, some districts would receive a smaller percentage of the total state package under the new formula, but only the Waukesha District, with its low unemployment rate and high property valuation would get less money, losing about $221,000 in the switch.

The board asked Hiestand to develop the formula further after taking recommendations from district directors and boards so that it can be submitted to the Department of Administration by Sept. 9.

Hiestand supposedly was meeting with the directors this morning. He was not available for comment or explanation of the differences involved between his figures and those of the local finance director and did not return a reporter's telephone call.

However, in a document which initially presented the need for a new formula to the state board, it was stated that the total enrollments eligible for aids in the 1975-77 biennium is expected to increase 5.9 per cent and the cost per student is expected to go up from $995 to $1,056 in the next school year and to $1,119 in the year after that.

"Maintaining state aids at the current level would require an additional $21.8 million, or a 29 per cent increase in the next biennium," the document stated. The statement can be interpreted to say that the cost will rise but it still will not cover the increase in aidable students, so the state has to come up with a new formula.

The problem has been kicked around for some time, and up to this date, nothing has been acceptable to the administrators.

Gov. Patrick Lucey in the current biennial budget had recommended a revised aid formula which would provide a larger portion of state dollars to low property districts, and an equalization formula was recommended by the interim legislative study committee on financing higher education.

The proposals and aiternatives, however, found no favor with the district directors, who felt that a simple allocation formula was not suitable to everyone.

The multi-faceted formula proposed by Hiestand apparently is supposed to be the solution.

But before the local directors buy it, Beno said, they will want questions answered.

Hit-and-run driver kills local man

MARSHFIELD — A 60-year-old Appleton man was killed almost instantly when he was struck by a hit-and-run auto as he crossed the city's main street about 11:20 p.m. Wednesday.

Dead at the scene from severe head and internal injuries was George C. Fitz, 2511 Brookdale Court. Police said he was approaching his car when he was struck by the southbound auto, which apparently was drag racing with another vehicle.

Fitz was thrown by the impact over the hood of his car into a meter post, from which his body rebounded into the street.

Police later apprehended three persons in one car, but were not successful in attempts to locate the second driver and vehicle.

"There is no doubt in my mind that we have the striking vehicle," said Capt. Don Haralson, head of the police department's detective bureau.

Haralson said the three men in the car, all brothers, had been drinking, but that a blood test was given to only one of them. He said the three had been uncooperative during questioning, and that the determination as to which one was driving had not been made.

He would not release their names, but said that two of them, ages 18 and 21, were from Marshfield, while the third, 33, was from St. Paul, Minn.

Haralson said he hoped the identity of the driver would be determined by later today, and that charges would be pressed against him.

Fitz was a native of Nekoosa and had lived in Appleton the past 25 years. He worked as a salesman for United Paper Corp., Menasha, and is survived by his widow and a son and daughter.

Fitz was a member of Emmanuel United Methodist Church, the American Legion, Appleton Evening Lions and United Commercial Travelers. He was a World War II veteran.

Funeral services will be at 1 p.m. Saturday at Emmanuel United Methodist, with burial in Highland Memorial Park.

Visitation will be Friday evening and Saturday before the service at Wichmann Funeral Home.

was doing around there. In fact, it appeared to me as though he was looking for trouble."

Dix said Wednesday he wasn't aware of the board ruling, but he received a letter Saturday indicating his papers were being investigated.

Rogers said that challenges and investigations are fairly common. He estimated there were about a dozen in the current period.

Rogers said he didn't believe initially that Dix couldn't meet the requirements because he assumed that Dix, like himself and other candidates, would file many more names than the minimum. Rogers noted that frequently some names must be eliminated.

But he said that Grover and the exaide pursued the matter and that on July 10, Rogers learned that Dix could be challenged for inadequate papers.

Noting he wouldn't have to campaign extensively without opposition, Rogers said: "It will save a lot of money and a lot of time that I can devote now to the work that I'm doing here now."

Dix defended the improper names on his papers, noting he didn't check out each one who signed them. He noted also he didn't know the boundaries of the district which were jagged and were changed recently.

Dix, 58, who unsuccessfully challenged Rogers in 1970 as a Republican, this time was to challenge him in the primary as a Democrat. Dix lost 2-1 in 1970.

cumbent Democrat." He declined to identify the person.

Dix said Wednesday that he believed Rogers was responsibile for the request for the investigation, but Rogers said it had been Grover.

Dix also contended Wednesday that Rogers had harassed him when he returned to the secretary of state's office July 9, the deadline day for filing, to complete his filing. He said Rogers was in the office when he arrived, questioned him about why he was there and followed him into the room where Dix signed his papers.

Rogers said he was in the office to see if anyone would file against him late as a Republican candidate had done two years ago. He said he didn't consider it unusual to be interested in that possibility.

Dix said Rogers followed him the entire time he was in the secretary's office. Dix had been contacted by Fahey July 5 to return to Madison to complete his filing.

Of Rogers' interest in his filing, Dix said: "He was inquisitive as to what I

Appleton woman bound over for murder trial

OSHKOSH — Mrs. Noreen Kelly of Appleton was bound over to Circuit Court for trial on a first degree murder charge late Wednesday after a preliminary hearing in Winnebago County Court.

Mrs. Kelly, 45, 602 S. Mayflower Drive, is charged in the shooting death of Alvin Manteufel, 68, at his rural Neenah home on Aug. 22, 1973.

Wednesday's preliminary hearing ended about 10:30 p.m. after 19 witnesses had been called to testify by Asst. Dist. Atty. Robert Vander Loop, who is prosecuting the case for the state. The witnesses detailed the chain of events on the evening of the shooting and subsequent investigation by county sheriff's department personnel.

Through questioning of witnesses, Vander Loop placed Mrs. Kelly at the scene of the shooting. Several witnesses testified that they saw no one besides the woman and Manteufel enter or leave the residence on the evening of the shooting. However, defense attorney James Long of Appleton attempted to establish through cross-examination of witnesses that anyone could have been hiding in the home and fired the shot.

Mrs. Penny Wandahsega of Neenah, who had been an upstairs tenant at the Manteufel home at 1129 E. Fairview Road, testified that the home was always left unlocked. She also testified that she saw no one else on the premises on Aug. 22 and that she had been downstairs to use the telephone about three hours before the shooting and saw no one.

Mrs. Kelly has claimed that she was in another room of the house when she heard the gunshot, then found Manteufel running around in the kitchen. Manteufel was found by sheriff's officers, face down on the kitchen floor. He had been shot once in the back. The bullet exited through his chest, went through a kitchen table and was found on the kitchen floor. The suspected murder weapon was found under the front porch of the home. The gun belonged to Mrs. Kelly.

Vander Loop attempted to establish a motive in the shooting by entering as evidence a copy of the last will and testament of Manteufel. It listed Mrs. Kelly as the sole benefactor of Manteufel's estate. That will is being held in county probate court. A legal ruling on whether it will be honored is being withheld until after the Kelly trial.

The bind-over came at the end of Wednesday's testimony when County Judge James Sarres ruled a crime had probably been committed and that probable cause exists to bring the defendant to trial. Preliminary hearings are held only to establish probable cause. The trial will be scheduled in Circuit Court.

A first degree murder charge was originally filed against Mrs. Kelly in October of 1973 after a seven-week investigation into the shooting. Former Winnebago County Judge James V. Sitter, however, dismissed the case, citing insufficient foundation for the complaint.

After charges were reopened May 24 against his client, Long filed a writ of prohibition with the Wisconsin Supreme Court, asking the court to prohibit the case from continuing. Long charged that the case was reopened only for purposes of harassment against Mrs. Kelly. But the state's high court denied the motion and proceedings were scheduled again.

County Judge William H. Carver, in whose court the preliminary hearing was held, disqualified himself from the case in May, since he was the district attorney who filed the original murder charge against Mrs. Kelly. Sarres was substituted.

Mrs. Kelly had at one time lived in the upstairs apartment of the Manteufel residence, and was the decedent's frequent companion. Several of Wednesday's witnesses, who were neighbors, referred to Manteufel as Mrs. Kelly's "boyfriend."

The woman remains free pending trial, since a $5,000 bond was posted.

New Greek regime frees political prisoners

BY PHILIP DOPOULOS
Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The new civilian government of Greece has freed all political prisoners and recognized Archbishop Makarios as president of Cyprus. But the new head of the Greek Cypriot regime on the island, President Glafcos Clerides, said he would not hand the office back to the archbishop.

One of Premier Constantine Caramanlis' first acts after naming a 12-man cabinet on Wednesday was to declare a general amnesty for all those jailed for political dissent during the seven years of military dictatorship.

Citizenship was restored to all who had been deprived of it, including actress Melina Mercouri, leftist political leader Andreas Papandreou and composer Mikos Theodorakis. The new government emptied the Yiaros Island concentration camp and shut it down.

Theodorakis flew home from Paris and said he thought the return to power of Caramanlis was a positive step. But he pointed out that "the political left is excluded" from the government.

The cabinet members are all centrists or rightists, and men of economic and bureaucratic espertise, indicating that Caramanlis planned a speedy assault on inflation and other economic woes.

Foreign Minister George Mavros, who is also deputy premier, announced the new regime's repudiation of the coup in Cyprus, which is generally believed to have been the work of the dictatorship. He said Greece "has accepted fully the United Nations Security Council decision on Cyprus. ... We, therefore, recognize President Makarios as the legal head of Cyprus."

But in Nicosia, the Cypriot capital, President Clerides said the people of Cyprus should decide the presidency, and he would hold an election "not later than within a few months."

Asked if Makarios could run, he said: "In a free country every citizen has the right to present himself for election." But he warned that "it would be a very unwise move for Makarios to come back under the present conditions."

The 61-year-old archbishop was proclaimed president automatically last year for a third five-year term when no candidate opposed him. Now in New York, he said earlier this week he planned to return to Cyprus in a few weeks. But there was no immediate comment from on Clerides' statements.

Clerides was Makarios' closest associate, political heir and the president of the House of Representatives. The latter post made him the constitutional successor to the president, and he moved into the top spot Tuesday after the collapse of the dictatorship in Athens pulled the rug from under the coup leaders in Cyprus.

No major fighting was reported on Cyprus Wednesday, but the Indian commander of the United Nations peacekeeping force reported indications Wednesday night that 400-500 Turkish troops with tanks were digging in 500 yards from the Nicosia airport and would try to seize it during the night.

Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim called the Security Council into emergency session in New York to deal with the reported threat. But Turkish Foreign Minister Turan Gunes send Waldheim a message assuring him that Turkey would not threaten or use force against the troops at the airport. Several council members said they were satisfied, and the council adjourned.

Meanwhile, a contingent of 500 British troops in armored cars was reported on its way to the airport from British bases in south Cyprus to bolster the U.N. force.

Clerides accused the Turks of moving heavy armor since the cease-fire, and said this created "a potentially dangerous situation because it is not possible for us to abide by the cease-fire if Turkish forces try to move their positions."

Gunes, Greek Foreign Minister Mavros and British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan were to meet in Geneva tonight to begin peace negotiations for Cyprus. Their three nations are the guarantors of the island's independence under the treaty that freed it from Britain in 1960.

It was expected that the ministers would meet for about three days, adopt a communique supporting the cease-fire and create a working group. The group is to begin concrete negotiations to resolve such issues as the withdrawal of the Greek army officers who led the coup, the withdrawal of the Turkish invasion forces, the future government of Cyprus and future relations between the Greek majority and the Turkish minority on Cyprus.

Clerides expressed little faith in the outcome of the Geneva talks, saying foreign governments could not work out a peace formula and impose it. He said a peaceful agreement could only be achieved by talks between the Greek and Turkish Cypriots "under the umbrella of the United Nations."

Discoverer of neutron dies

LONDON (AP) — The death of Sir James Chadwick, who won the Nobel physics prize in 1935 for the discovery of the neutron, was announced today in the Times of London. He was 82.

The announcement did not say when Chadwick died or give the cause of death.

Chadwick was working with Lord Rutherford at Cambridge University's Cavendish Laboratory after World War I when he discovered the neutron, a key step in the development of atomic energy.

As World War II approached, he became deeply involved in research pointing to the development of the atomic bomb. Associates considered him the first Englishman who fully appreciated the danger that Germany might harness the atom for military purposes.

In 1943 he went to the United States as head of a British atomic team to assist in the development of the bomb, taking with him senior scientists from a nuclear department he had established at Liverpool University. He was responsible for coordinating the work of American, British and Canadian scientists working on the bomb.

Illinois to start lottery

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois becomes on Tuesday the 11th state seeking to cash in on the growing popularity of legalized lotteries.

For 50 cents, anyone over age 18 will be able to buy a chance to win prizes ranging from $20 to $1 million.

Weekly drawings — the first Aug. 8 — will produce about 25,000 winners of prizes ranging from $20 to $300,000. A millionaire drawing will be held about every three months.

An estimated 10,000 grocery stores, pharmacies, newsstands, department stores, lodges and charitable organizations have been licensed to sell the tickets.

Sales agents get to keep 10 per cent of the take. Forty-five per cent will go to prizes, the balance to state government.

School busing compromise faces fight in House

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate-approved compromise that would limit busing for school desegregation faces a tough fight in the House, which is insisting on stronger curbs.

"We will stand firm," Rep. Joe D. Waggoner, D-La., a leader of busing opponents, said Wednesday after the Senate agreed, 81 to 15, to accept the compromise written into a $25.2-billion education bill.

The legislation is expected to be brought up in the House early next week. At that time, Waggoner will seek to have the bill sent back to conference with the Senate with instructions to insist on the House antibusing language.

On Monday, the House by a 261-122 vote reaffirmed its position that no pupil should be bused beyond the second-closest school to his home.

The compromise accepted by the Senate would allow busing past the second-closest school if a court considers it necessary to protect the rights of minority children.

The 81-15 vote did not reflect the Senate's true feeling on busing. Only 15 minutes before that vote, senators rejected, 55-42, an attempt to send the bill back to conference with instructions to accept the House provisions.

One apparent reason for the House delay on consideration of the compromise is to see how the Supreme Court rules today in a key busing case. At issue is a Detroit case on whether a court may order busing across school district lines to promote desegregation.

Although President Nixon was strongly opposed to the original Senate bill, whose busing curbs were strengthened in the compromise, he has not spoken publicly about the compromise.

But if he should veto the bill, 146 House members have promised to support him. That is enough members to ensure the vetoed bill could not become law.

Economic chief fights inflation with humor

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's chief economic coordinator, Kenneth Rush, was asked by a newsman what he tells his wife when she is confronted with inflated food prices and a family checkbook that won't balance.

"I tell her she's eating too much," Rush replied with a smile on Tuesday.

He quickly followed up to tell reporters in the White House press room, "I'm joking. I regret the inflation very, very much."

'El Cordobes' charged with assaulting official

CORDOBA, Spain (AP) — Matador Manuel "El Cordobes" Benitez has been charged with assaulting a public official after an argument with a traffic officer, authorities say.

The retired bullfighter, who was charged on Thursday, could face up to a month in jail and a heavy fine if convicted.

Benitez, who left the ring two years ago, made an estimated $10 million during his career.

Britain, Greece, Turkey to begin search for permanent peace on Cyprus

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The foreign ministers of Britain, Greece and Turkey prepared to meet here tonight to begin negotiations seeking permanent peace on explosive Cyprus.

James Callaghan of Britain, Turan Gunes of Turkey and George Mavros of the new Greek government were expected to meet for about three days, adopt a communique supporting the cease-fire on the island the Turks invaded last Saturday and create a working group.

The working group would do the actual negotiating on such concrete matters as continued Turkish control of the Kyrenia-Nicosia corridor the Turks captured, the withdrawal from Cyp. of the Greek army officers who led the coup that ousted President Makarios, and the restoration of constitutional government to the island.

The abdication of the Greek military dictatorship in Athens was considered a good omen for the negotiations. But the new interim president of Cyprus, Glafcos Clerides, said he had little faith in the Geneva talks if Cyprus were not represented.

Foreign governments cannot work out a peace formula abroad and impose it on the island, he declared. Britain, Greece and Turkey are the three guarantors of the independence of Cyprus under the treaty in which Britain freed the Mediterranean island in 1960.

Although Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's telephone calls to Ankara had much to do with Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit's decision to accept the cease-fire, it was not clear what role the United States would play now.

The British Foreign Office said it would have no objection to full American participation at the peace talks, and privately British officials in London discussed the possibility of getting the United States to add its power and prestige to any agreements that are reached. But so far Kissinger has assigned only an observer, Assistant Secretary of State William B. Buffum, to the talks.

Before he left Athens, Mavros said the foreign ministers would discuss "only the Security Council's decision which calls for a cease-fire and restoration of order on the island."

That, however, is only part of the resolution adopted last Saturday. It also calls for an immediate end to foreign military intervention in Cyprus, withdrawal of the Greek leaders of the coup and negotiations to restore constitutional government to Cyprus.

The Turkish foreign minister said in an interview that his government no longer seeks partition of the island between its Greek majority and Turkish minority. But he said Ankara does favor a "federal solution" that would take into account the existence of the two communities with the same rights and with strong attachments to their motherlands.

DNR may develop refuge harbor on Lake Michigan

Post-Cresc ent Madison bureau

MADISON – After many years of intermittent discus sion, the state Department of Natural Resources will examine a tangible proposal for the development of a harbor of refuge on the Wisconsin shor e of Lake Michigan.

The policy board of the department has instructed a special committee to consult with a private developer who is planning a campgro und and marina at the mouth of Fische r Creek in Manitowoc County and has proposed that the state collaborate in t he construction of the marina portion of the project.

The site is the best l ocation for a harbor of refuge betwee n Manitowoc and Sheboygan, Arthur Do ll, chief of the department's planning bureau, informed the board.

A board committee consisting of Richard Stearn of Stur geon Bay and Thomas Fox of Washbu rn will inspect the study and consult wi th the private developer in connection with an air tour of the lake shore to be made shortly.

The committee will also tour by air the eastern shore of the lake to study the harbor development program of Michigan, said to be one of the most expensive and advanced in the Great Lakes area.

A Wisconsin harbor of refuge effort has been discussed intermittently by policy making officers of the department over several decades. One of the most persistent of the advocates of such a program was Guido Rahr of Manitowoc, who served several terms as a member of the old conservation commission, starting in the 1940s.

Doll explained that a key factor in a state program would be the attitude of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the financial resources of the national agency.

Low birth rate will change school plans

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Children attending school in the 1980s can look forward to either smaller classes, empty classrooms, or longer bus rides, a report on population and school enrollment suggests.

The Wisconsin Taxpayer's Alliance made a number of predictions about the future of education in the state based on the reduced birth rate during the last 10 years.

The birth rate has dropped from 25.1 per thousand population in 1960 to 13.7 in 1973, the alliance said, the lowest since the rate was first recorded in 1910.

The result is that more students are graduating from the state's schools now than are entering them. The reverse was true in 1960.

Nearly 100,000 children enrolled in the first grade in 1967 when there were 71,812 high school seniors. In 1973, there were 78,966 children in first grade and 80,131 seniors.

The alliance reported that 40 per cent of the state's 382 high school districts showed a decrease in enrollment in the 1972-73 school year.

"Most school districts will soon have a decline in enrollment if they don't have one already," the report said. "These declines will eventually mean a reduced teacher-pupil ratio or a reduction in the number of teachers employed by the district," plus more consolidation of rural schools.

The alliance also said transfers of private school pupils into public schools has resulted in a shift from private schools constituting 25 per cent of the total school enrollment in 1964 to 10 per cent in 1973.

Lower public school enrollments paved the way for decreased local school debts for the first time since 1945, the report said. Between 1971 and 1972, local school debts decreased by $16.4 million.

Dyke warned on possibly insulting election supporters

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Republican candidate for lieutenant governor says he has cautioned his running mate against campaign remarks which might offend big business.

State Rep. John M. Alberts of Oconomowoc said he admires gubernatorial candidate William D. Dyke for having complained about business support of Democrats, but that Dyke's complaints "might have been premature."

Business seems pleased with industrial tax relief sponsored by Democrats, yet may resume its traditional financial support of GOP candidacies later in the campaign, Alberts said.

Alberts was quoted in today's editions of the Milwaukee Sentinel, 24 hours after Dyke had said Republicans must seek new sources of support because of a transition of business support to Democrats.

Dyke said he has little to lose politically by censuring the Democrats' tax-relief program.

"There are a lot of businessmen who are going to be upset with his stance," Alberts said. "Some won't read what he is saying, but just look at the top of it."

"It certainly has caused the phones to ring in our campaign office as well as his," Alberts said.

"I think this situation," he added, "should have been taken after more thought and consideration."

As for his own campaign, Alberts said, "if I don't get support from the business community, I don't get support from anybody."

The May convention of the state GOP chose Dyke, a former Madison mayor, and Alberts as the party's ticket to oppose the re-election of Democratic Gov. Patrick J. Lucey and Lt. Gov. Martin Schreiber.

Dyke said Lucey's tax relief for factories, in the form of reduced local property taxes, is unfairly being subsidized by money from a shared-tax fund which was earmarked for municipalities.

Dyke calls it a political pitch to the business community and says Republicans must seek alternate sources of support.

Alberts, who then met Wednesday with Dyke to review campaign strategy, related: "I think he is saying: 'Look, business isn't supporting me.' But he might have been a bit premature in decrying any lack of success in fund raising."

The legislator said the Dyke-Alberts campaign is still taking shape.

"Many decisions are being made without proper planning," he said.

The confusion is reflected in published reports that Dyke had harbored thoughts of quitting the race altogether.

"I am convinced that he is in it and he is going to stay in it," Alberts said.

Republican campaign issues have not jelled, Alberts said.

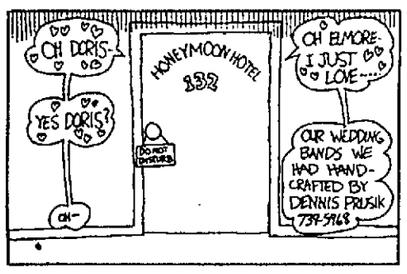
"We have been scatter-gunning it," he said. "We have not refined it to three or four issues that we are going to harp on."

"If you scatter-gun, nobody knows where you stand," he said.

Canners request use of high school students

Post-Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON — Fearing a shortage of labor during the peak harvest days of late August and September, the Wisconsin Canners and Freezers Association is again requesting the support of the state Department of Public Instruction to allow high school students to continue work after the start of the school year.



While urging that state Supt. Barbara Thompson repeat her action of a year ago and send a letter to school principals and administrators urging cooperation with food processors, the WCFA is also suggesting that each business begin stressing its need for the student labor force to school officials.

In his newsletter to association members, WCFA Executive Director Alvin H. Randall urged members to keep local school officials informed of the progress of the 1974 crops and to remind them of the importance which the business adds to the community tax base, payroll and other community concerns.

Two Shiocton brothers charged with Oshkosh service station robbery

OSHKOSH — Two Shiocton brothers were brought into Winnebago County Court Tuesday and charged with the Monday night robbery of an Oshkosh service station.

Judge William H. Carver set bond at $5,000 each for Jose A. Anaya, 19, and Raymond J. Anaya, 23, and scheduled a preliminary examination for July 31.

The brothers were arrested Monday night shortly after a robbery at the Consolidated Service Station, 707 S. Main St. According to the station manager, Lynn Durant, Omro, two men wearing masks over their faces walked into the station through the back alley, approached the attendant and told him to hand over the receipts or he and another employe would be harmed. He gave them $50 and they left.

A passerby, who saw the incident taking place, notified police, who arrived within monents after the robbers left the station.

The brothers were apprehended within one block of the station. Police who searched the area afterwards found $50 on the ground nearby. No weapons were discovered.

Both men remain in the Winnebago County jail in lieu of posting bond.

Courts

Two men convicted of criminal trespass to a dwelling were each fined $200 Wednesday by Circuit Court Judge Gordon Myse.

Donald H. Benjamin Jr., 27, Larsen, and Daniel L. Fredrick, 21, 612 Main St., Neenah, had been accused of entering the Fred Rusch farmhouse on State 47 near County Trunk S, Town of Center, on April 9.

The two originally had been charged with burglary and attempted theft, but they subsequently pleaded guilty to the reduced charges.

Steven G. Redenz, 22, 1513½ N. Richmond St., was placed on probation Tuesday for three years and ordered to spend the first 60 days in jail for the July 11 burglary of the First Methodist Church, 325 E. Franklin St.

Police said Redenz took four speakers, a stereo set and a windowpane in the break-in.

The sentence was imposed by Circuit Judge Gordon Myse.

Jeffrey Solberg, 21, Reedsville, was placed on probation for three years, with the first 60 days in the Outagamie County jail, for the Sept. 28, 1973, attempted burglary of the Starlite Bar on State 55, north of Kaukauna.

Circuit Judge Gordon Myse gave Solberg work release privileges. Solberg, one of two persons sentenced after the incident, was found guilty after a June 27 trial.
